Strange Young Russian.
NRA or Dictator.
50,000,000 in Unions?
You, Also, Would Laugh.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HENRY J. ALLEN, who has been governor of Kansas, finds many things that surprise him in Russia. He describes a charming young woman who showed him the palace in which Catherine the Second used to take snuff and "sneeze for hours."

This young lady attached no importance to religion, agreeing with Lenin that it is "the opium of the people."

Mr. Allen asked her:

She answered:

MR. ALLEN tells you that in Russia you may travel on the train, sleep in hotels and eat three times a day at a cost of nine dollars for 24 hours. That is the "intourist" charge for foreigners. It is cheaper if you travel third class on hard wooden seats. How do you suppose Russia manages that?

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, head of Columbia College, says we are going to have "NRA or a dictator." We might have both. Mussolini combines dictatorship and NRA in himself, dictating hours, wages, labor and business absolutely. Hitler is another and Stalin is a third.

Some think a dictatorship difficult in the United States, with population so different, stretching from Seattle to Key West. Others ask: If it can be done in Russia, twice as big as the United States, with a bigger population, why can it not be done here?

The answer is that Americans are not Slavs, have never been ruled by Romanoff families, a Peter the Great, or an Ivan the Terrible, and it would be hard for them suddenly to bend in submission.

MR. GREEN of the American Federation of Labor says five million men are enrolled in unions, and the total will be twenty-five millions a little later.

Miss Elizabeth Christman, president of the Women's Trade Union League, wants five million women enrolled to match Mr. Green's five million men and more later.

Miss Christman thinks short hours and high wages should be enforced by "a tight system of carrying out penalties," and demands a labor government.

That would come automatically with twenty-five million men and twenty-five million women enrolled in unions. With that arrangement complete, the

NATS BEAT GIANTS IN THIRD GAME

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

GRIFFITH STADIUM, WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The Washington Senators, champions of the American League, ruined all chances of the 1933 World Series being decided in four games when they scored their first victory over the New York Giants, National League champions, in the third battle here this afternoon. The Giants won the first two games.

PRESIDENT CHEERED

The sun broke through the clouds at 1:30. At this same moment President Roosevelt appeared in his box. A shout went up from more than 25,000 already in the park. The United States Army Band stood at attention in front of the President's box for a minute and then played the national anthem. The band, 70 strong, left the scene and the President sat down to enjoy the diamond spectacle.

Judge Landis stepped across the field and officially announced that the game was on. Earl Whitehill and Fred Fitzsimmons started to warm up.

GAME STARTS LATE

The belated contest got under way almost 20 minutes late, but the sun was shining and the fans were still coming in, although there were something like 8,000 empty seats as the game began. Earl Whitehill's first pitch was right over the plate for a strike as Joe Moore looked at it. Goslin won a big round of applause as he ran into the right field stands to capture Moore's foul.

Every man in the Senator lineup was loaded with pep. The Washington fans had a big ovation for Bill Terry when he stepped to the plate. Bill hit the first pitch and was thrown out by Myers. None

Play-by-Play Of Third Game

GRIFFITH STADIUM, WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The play-by-play account of the third battle of the 1933 World Series between the New York Giants, champions of the National League, and the Washington Senators, champions of the American League, follows:

FIRST INNING

GIANTS—Moore up—Strike 1, called. Ball 1, inside. Foul behind the plate, strike 2 Ball, outside. Moore lifted a short fly to Goslin, caught just inside foul territory as he bounced against a field box.

Critz up—Strike 1, called. Ball 1, outside. It was a change of pace. Ball 2, high. Foul into dirt, strike 2. Ball 3, low and inside. Critz grounded out, Bluege to Kuhel.

SENATORS—Myer up—Ball 1, low. The Senators asked for the ball and appeared to be satisfied after one look. Strike 1, called. Ball 2, outside. Strike 2, called. It was a fast one. Myer singled to left.

Goslin up—Goslin hit the first ball pitched against the right field fence for two bases, Myer stopping at third. The Giants had a quick conference with Fitzsimmons.

Manush up—Ball 1, low. Manush flied to Ryan, who took the ball in short left field.

Cronin up—Bell was warming up for the Giants. Strike 1 called. Myer scored as Fitzsimmons threw out Cronin, Goslin going to third. Fitzsimmons made a difficult stop,

Puncturing the White Man's Pretense

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S decision that the question of arms or tariff is not to be introduced into the debt parley is inspiringly sound and just.

The primary object of the defaulting European nations is to dodge their debts by complicating and befogging the issue.

They do not like to be pilloried as defaulters.

That is not good for business.

They do not like to be held up before the rest of mankind as debt dodgers.

That injures their standing among those nations where they have been posing as moral leaders.

THE WHITE MAN'S burden, according to the poet, has been to teach the right to the darker races—dark in color and presumably dark in their ignorance of ethical standards.

Teaching the right was something the white man was supposed to be doing quite unselfishly—except for a little rake-off on the opium traffic, and a little compensating plunder of the natives here and there.

But now it would seem as if the white man did not exactly know the right when he saw it, or if he did know it, did not follow it when a conflict with his greedy purposes was concerned.

The dark man had sort of suspected this for some time.

That rake-off on the opium traffic, and that general plunder of the natives (for their own good, of course), had somewhat shaken the dark man's faith in the sincerity and unselfishness of his noble, bleached brother.

In fact, the dark man had about come to the conclusion that maybe the burden was the dark man's —that maybe he was paying the freight while the white man posed and profited.

Now that the dark man knows that the white man is a defaulter whenever it is to his interest to be, and that his word is worthless, and even his bond is dishonored, the white man's burden is going to be a little heavier than it was.

Next time the white man indulges in virtuous pretense, he is going to get the "raspberry" from the dark man.

The expressive words, "Oh, yeah," and "beans," and "bunk," are going to be engrafted on the dark man's vocabulary.

THAT DISTINCTLY is not going to be good for the white man's burden, nor the white man's business.

It is not even going to be good for the rake-off on the opium traffic.

It might conceivably be cheaper as well as more moral for the white man to pay his honest debts.

Some new and unsuspected white men's burdens may develop if he does not do so.

And in that case, Mr. Kipling will have to write a brand new, hysterical and hypocritical poem.

But then what else is there for the inspirational poet of the British Empire to do in these degenerate days?

AID SENT TO BYRD'S FLAGSHIP IN DISTRESS

WILMINGTON, N. C., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's polar expedition flagship the Bear of Oakland reported today it was in distress off treacherous Frying Pan Shoals on the North Carolina Coast and later was taken into tow by the Stone Towing Company tug Blanche.

Manager reports received by the Coast Guard did not disclose the nature of the vessel's difficulties, but Coast Guardsmen here believed the craft had developed engine trouble. No serious weather disturbances off the coast have been reported for several days.

The Oak Island station said the two were slowly making their way to port.

RENEE ADOREE . . . . LOSES FIGHT AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

RENEE ADOREE LOSES FIGHT AGAINST DEATH

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Renee Adoree, former movie star, died today at Sunland, health resort near here, of a chronic respiratory ailment which forced her out of the films a few years ago.

The French actress's triumph in "The Big Parade" opposite John Gilbert in 1925 is still remembered as one of the greatest in film history.

She was cast in "Call of the Flesh" with Ramon Novarro three years ago and against the advice of physicians insisted on completing the role. She collapsed when the camera had captured her final scene.

She was taken at once to a sanitarium in Prescott, Ariz., where for months she lay in bed seeking new strength. About six months ago she was released and returned to make her home at Tujunga, near Hollywood in the matter of miles, but far removed actually from the merry life of the film capital.

SKIPPER ARRESTED IN TIPSY TUG CHASE

International News Service.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Capt. Charles A. Elliott, 63, of New York, had the doubtful distinction today of being the first man to be arrested on a charge of operating a steamboat while under the influence of liquor.

The skipper, relieved of his command of the steam barge Schuyler, resolved to take his ship on a farewell cruise in Buffalo harbor.

Patrolman John Whalen, in command of the police tug, first sighted the Schuyler steering a straight course for a low bridge. Whalen shouted a warning. Skipper Elliott responded derisively. Then there was a crash of splintering timbers.

Minus its pilot house and smoke stack, the Schuyler held determinedly to her course. Elliott was giving her all she had, but it wasn't good enough. And 10 miles after the chase had started it was over, and Capt. Elliott was escorted with all the honors due the skipper of a ship, to police headquarters.

Woman Freed, Man Jailed in Baby Case

Virginia Hodge, 28, after more than a month in jail awaiting trial for abandoning her 3-month-old daughter, Barbara, was freed today.

William Acker, 30, of 110 Millvale avenue, the father of the child, has been out on bond during the month.

Today Judge Sylvester J. Snee heard of the woman's incarceration and the man's freedom. And when the woman pleaded guilty, he freed her, and sent Acker to jail for from one to two months, and ordered that he pay $2.50 a week for the child's support.

The baby has been in the Zoar Home since two newsies found her on a front doorstep in Howley avenue last April. She was left there, the mother said, "after my money was exhausted, and the baby was sick from malnutrition."

But in August, when the woman began to worry about the child and made inquiries, she was arrested.

BULLETIN

Riot sticks and guns in hands, 100 deputy sheriffs tore through the ranks of several hundred pickets in Ambridge this afternoon in a new and serious outbreak in violence.

Two pickets were reported shot, several were clubbed over the heads and hundreds were routed by tear gas.

As the deputies met pickets en route they ordered them to drop their clubs and walk away from the plant.

As they neared the plant the deputies fired several volleys of shots into the air and began tossing tear gas bombs.

Then they struck the main body of the pickets.

They gave orders to pickets to drop the weapons they carried.

In the excitement shots were fired.

Two pickets were reported shot, one in the neck, the other in an ear.

Soon an ambulance drove into the plant.

A slight breeze carried waves of tear gas to the hillside, where hundreds of men and women stood.

They scurried up the hillside to escape the vapors. Several were reported sickened by the gas.

Egan was taken in tow on a bench warrant by Police Chief John W. Flocker, of Ambridge, on an old charge. A few hours earlier Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty had revealed that Egan had been sought for sentence. In April he had been convicted of inciting to riot in a Communistic demonstration in downtown Pittsburgh. Refused a new trial, he was at liberty on bond.

Hours before Egan's arrest two workmen were clubbed by men and women when they tried to enter the Wyckoff drawn steel plant. They were Joseph LaRocco and Thayer Peters, 46, of Baden. Police later found LaRocco and escorted him into the plant.

Another worker, bound for the plant, was chased by the pickets. He ran a half-mile and hid for an hour under a porch in Eighteenth street while the strike sympathizers searched the neighborhood for him. Finally, he called

'I'LL FIX IT,' JOHNSON SAYS OF COAL STRIKE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Before boarding a train for Washington today, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the National Recovery Act, revealed to International News Service the extra day he had unexpectedly spent in New York was in a vain effort to get the heads of America's great steel companies to come to an agreement that would end the strike in their "captive" mines and remove the danger threatening the operation of the whole bituminous coal code.

A meeting is in progress in New York today attended by Myron C. Taylor, president of United States Steel, and Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel, and other leaders, but Gen. Johnson refused to stay over for it. He said:

"The steel people are afraid that if they recognize the union in their coal mines that it will force recognition in their steel plants.

"But I find that in the Illinois sector they have been operating their mines under union contracts for years."

"Hair splitting? Why you haven't a hair on your head too fine for those fellows to split."

Johnson added:

"Don't say it's stalemated because I am going to fix it."

The General said the attitude of the steel companies regarding the "checkoff" and "checkweighman" was endangering the "only ideal labor union set-up" which had come under the NRA. Other industries had horizontal unions, one for every trade, but the coal industry would be unionized vertically, one union from bottom to top. The General said:

"Now, if John Lewis can't get the miners to stop the strike, they'll say he is an irresponsible leader, and if he does do it, it will remove the pressure from the steel heads to make them come into the code 100 per cent."

CLAIRTON SIEGE ON; MINE HOLIDAY WANES

A sullen, threatening crowd of miners and steel workers picketed Clairton's Carnegie Steel Company plants today. Thoughts of yesterday's battle in Ambridge stirred their wrath.

Sporadic outbursts of stoning and jeering punctuated the morning hours as 1,000 men—most of them striking coal miners—kept the vigil.

A taste of trouble came with the injury of two men last night and the arrest of two men who were carrying guns this morning. Five were arrested for other offenses from stabbing to drunkenness.

Meanwhile, the coal strike seemed tottering on its last legs as more and more miners returned to the pits. Roving bands of pickets were reported on all sides

ROOSEVELT BACK AT DESK TO PUSH CREDIT EXPANSION

BRUERE LIKELY TO DIRECT CAMPAIGN

President Calls on People to Double Relief Efforts

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt was back at his desk at the White House today from New York, accompanied by Henry Bruere, president of the Bowery Savings Bank, who is expected to become the head of the President's credit expansion drive.

An early announcement on finance, particularly the organization of the huge credit pushing effort planned by the President, is in prospect.

BOARDS TRAIN

The President delivered his second speech in three days last night before the National Conference of Catholic Charities in New York, calling upon the people to redouble their relief efforts for the harder part still ahead. The President told the conference:

"We have to have courage and discipline and vision to blaze the new trails in life. But underlying all our efforts is the conviction that men cannot live unto themselves alone. A democracy must be bound together by the ties of neighborliness."

FEAR OF FEAR

Noting it was seven months to the day since he had assumed the presidency, the chief executive recalled he had said in his inauguration speech that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." He said:

"I believed then—and I know now—that our people would support definite action that sought the goal of giving every man his due. Leadership I have tried to give, but the great and most important fact has been the response—the wholehearted response—of America. We have recaptured and rekindled our pioneering spirit. We have insisted that this shall always be a spirit of justice, a spirit of teamwork, a spirit of sacrifice, and, above all, a spirit of neighborliness."

Mr. Roosevelt said the government has organized new relief measures on a vast scale, but does not intend to take over the whole relief job. He said:

"Many times I have insisted that every community and every state must first do their share."

Out of it all, he continued, is emerging a new science of social treatment through "an unselfish partnership between all church and private social service agencies with the agencies of government itself." He added:

"We have ventured and we have won; we shall venture further and we shall win.

"I can never express in words what the loyalty and trust of the nation have meant to me. Not for a moment have I doubted that we would climb out of the valley of gloom."

WAGNER SHUNS MINE STRIFE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The National Labor Board will not intervene in any of the disorders at coal mines, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Dem.), of New York, chairman of the board, announced today. He said:

"The board feels that the National Bituminous Coal Labor Board should be given complete control over all labor disputes in the industry. Where violence occurs at mines local police may be expected to control the situation pending prompt action by the National Coal Labor Board."

President Roosevelt has not yet appointed his representatives on the Coal Labor Board, which will consist of 15 members—five designated by the President, five to be designated by the coal operators, and five to be designated by the miners.

Peace Terms Offered By Striking Miners

3-Point Treaty Set To Settle Mine Union Fight

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 5.—Western Pennsylvania's bituminous holiday will end the instant the miners' union is given recognition, either in effect, as interpolated the other day by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, or by contract as in the case of commercial operators, leaders of the movement here revealed today.

Neither the H. C. Frick Coke Company, nor any of the captive mine operators would have to sign the code. Neither would they have to make contracts with the United Mine Workers of America.

Attorney Anthony Cavalcante, acting as mediator, has proposed to Gov. Gifford Pinchot that he intercede for the miners with a proposition along this line.

Pinchot, the day before yesterday, in a message to the miners, declared it was his opinion that such recognition had been granted. He said he had been informed by Gen. Johnson that a letter from Thomas Moses, president of the Frick Company, meant such recognition and he enumerated checkoff of union dues, recognition of mine grievances committees and checkweighman as the three points of such recognition.

OPERATORS' STAND

Captive mine operators yesterday expressed themselves as not feeling bound to these three points.

At several of the Frick mines in the Connellsville coke region attempts of local grievance committees to gain recognition met with rebuff from the mine management.

Yesterday's mass meeting of representatives from 103 locals from six counties of Western Pennsylvania reiterated the miners' demands for "full and complete recognition." Solemnly, three delegates from each local represented raised their hands and pledged allegiance to the cause.

Today some of these leaders amplified their stand in the matter. Said one:

"We're willing to take the Frick company word for it. If they'll give us a letter promising the checkoff, pit committee and checkweighman, we'll be satisfied."

CONTRACT SCORNED

Another expressed his views:

"A contract isn't so much. Didn't the Pittsburgh Coal Company abrogate its contract with the United Mine Workers in 1927. All we want is for the company to do the things it promises."

While the signature of the Frick company was emphasized at yesterday's meeting as necessary to an agreement it was not considered an absolute bar to a settlement today.

Cavalcante said today he had prepared resolutions for a number of the locals in this region promising an immediate return to work if the three points of union recognition are carried out. Cavalcante said a few of the locals had voted favorably on these resolutions and he had informed Gov. Pinchot of their actions. He emphasized that Frick does not have to sign anything.

COUGHLIN HITS LABOR CHARGE

DETROIT, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Replying to a charge made in Washington by Frank X. Martel, head of the Detroit Federation of Labor, to the effect that he was pursuing an "open shop" policy contrary to the interests of organized labor, Father Charles E. Coughlin said today that Martel was "grossly misinformed" as to labor conditions at the Shrine of the Little Flower, where construction is under way.

Martel had asked the American Federation of Labor to find Father Coughlin, nationally known priest, no longer entitled to any financial support from any trade unionist. Father Coughlin said:

"A number of the laborers engaged are non-union. Many of them belong to the union. Those non-union members are identified with the Shrine of the Little Flower and are engaged in building their own church for which they pay out of their own pocket.

"The wages being paid at the Shrine of the Little Flower Church are as high if not higher than are being paid elsewhere in the city of Detroit on building construction."

Virginia Miners Out; Charge Code 'Cheat'

GRUNDY, Va., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Claiming that the operators are not complying with the recovery code, miners of the Buchanan County Coal Corporation with mines near here, went on strike today.

1,000 STRIKERS KEEP SIEGE AT CLAIRTON

PICKET SEIZED

He told police a gun they found under his arm and shells they found in his pockets weren't his—he'd picked them up in the street. Venturo was held.

Frank James, a Negro striker, had a gun on him when he was searched. So state police arrested him.

State police charged two men with disorderly conduct — Ben Allen and Ben Donofaro, both of Clairton. Donofaro was charged with drunkenness.

ASSAULT SUSPECT

State police also arrested Tony Lucianni, of Clairton, and charged him with felonious assault and battery. They allege he stabbed Robert Fratarelle, 20, a steel workman, in a mob attack on Fratarelle when he tried to enter the Carnegie mill early today. The injured man is in West Penn Hospital.

James, Allen, Donofaro and Lucianni will have hearings today before Justice of the Peace Clyde Patterson, of Clairton.

Robert Smith, a Negro of Chamber street, was beaten and his face slashed by a razor when he tried to do what Fratarelle couldn't do.

All through the night the steel workers and the miners howled and jeered outside the gate. Cars trying to crash the gates of the mill were stoned, their windows broken.

DARED TO FIGHT

As the mob worked itself into a state of frenzy they shouted to the deputy sheriffs stolidty protecting company property:

"Come out. Come out. Come out and fight. We dare you."

Harassed state police restored order for a time. There were only three of them, however, and trouble broke out after each of their visits.

As broad daylight lit the scene of their patrol, the picketers hurled stones at automobiles within a few feet of the troopers. Motorists from the outskirts of the town complained they had been stoned, although they had nothing to do with the strike.

The crowd grew all night and was still growing early today. It planned a big mass meeting in Clairton baseball field at 4 p. m. today.

Many of the miners already there were from Fayette County, where most of the mines continued shut today, the third day since officials of the United Mine Workers ordered the men back to work.

The miners were still waiting for the H. C. Frick Coke Company to sign the pact recognizing the union and the H. C. Frick Coke Company still maintained its silence.

The miners maintained their pickets.

Three hundred of them invaded Latrobe and picketed the Latrobe Electric Steel Company. Some 600 men failed to pass the line and the plants remained closed.

140 MEN RETURN

Some 140 men were back at work in two Moon Run coal mines, with a gang of more than 400 pickets reported on their way from Montour to pull them out.

Two days ago, the same pickets went down into the Moon Run Coal Company's pit and forced miners to lay down their tools.

About 500 miners returned to work in three mines in the Burgettstown district today without disorders or picketing.

Six state troopers under Sergt. M. J. Crowley, of the Butler barracks, patrolled the district. They feared the advance of pickets from Canonsburg, Houston and Westland locals of the United Mine Workers of America, who had threatened to patrol the district.

All the mines in the Avella district were expected to open as the march back to work proceeded.

At 2 a. m. 50 or more men, probably additional deputy sheriffs or workmen, were smuggled into the Spang-Chalfant plant in box cars, which moved first through the A. M. Byers plant. Pickets crowded about the box cars, but they were repulsed by a barrage of tear gas.

Several hours later the pickets defeated efforts to unload three more box cars filled with men. The pickets jammed the switch blocks with railroad ties.

At 10 o'clock last night an ambulance drove up to the plant, but the driver drove off when the pickets booed him.

Several thousands of striker sympathizers and curious turned out for a meeting last night in a field near the plant. Speakers criticized the American Federation of Labor. James Egan, asserted:

"Our union is not a Communist union, but there are Communists in it, as there are Republicans and Democrats."

John Meldon, national secretary-treasurer of the Steel and Metal Workers' Industrial Union, is a candidate for Council in Pittsburgh on the Communist ticket.

MINE STUDENT STRIKE FAILS

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 5.—Strikes and unionism are in the blood of school children who have watched their miner fathers in walkout after walkout here, for years.

But the teachers' birch rod may mean more to them than the fathers' union and may be the reason Jefferson Township school children are back with the books today.

They walked out yesterday. They said:

Girl Robbed

JEANNETTE YETSKO

Miss Yetsko, 1250 Brushton avenue, robbed by a Negro who leaped from behind a tree, seized her near her home. In the struggle she dropped her purse, which he picked up in his flight. Loot: "$2 and some change." This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

FOOTPAD ROBS, CHOKES GIRL

A Negro footpad, who choked Jeannette Yetsko, of 1250 Brushton avenue, and robbed her of her purse at Lang avenue and McPherson street last night, was sought by police today.

Confronting the young woman as she was walking in McPherson street, the Negro warned her against an outcry and then seized her by the throat, police said.

After snatching her purse he fled. The purse contained $2.45 in cash and a key to her home, the victim told police.

DIE STRIKERS GET WARNING

DETROIT, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—So far as the major employers here are concerned, a statement published today said, the strike of several thousand tool and die makers will be over Friday, but the strikers gave no indication of recognizing that ultimatum.

The employers' statement—signed by seven automobile companies and 38 tool and die manufacturers—said they would continue to operate under the terms of NRA automotive codes and that "those for whom there is work" will be "deemed as having severed all relations with their respective companies" unless they return by Friday.

In reply to that, Jay J. Griffen, organizer for the Mechanics' Educational Society of America, declared the employers have sought to "nullify" the codes through exceptions and that the automobile companies "do not want to recognize organized labor."

WEIRTON GROUP TRICKS PICKET CORDON

100 Employes March To Mill, Flanked By Police

By DAVID ROSENTHAL
Staff Correspondent.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Oct. 5.—Taking picketing strikers by surprise, 100 employes of the Weirton Steel company, guarded by almost two score police and deputy sheriffs, marched two by two into the Pope mill here this morning, unmolested.

The pickets had expected the men to enter singly. Instead they approached the mill in military formation in the middle of the street led by Hugh Scanlon, mill superintendent, and T. E. Millsop, of Pittsburgh, assistant to the president.

Chief of Police Ross H. Cunningham and Sheriff Ray B. Long, of Jefferson County, were in charge of the guard stationed at the gates.

Two hundred and fifty pickets including a dozen girls jeered but made no attempt to stop the workmen from entering.

Scanlon later said the finishing department was operating 100 per cent.

At the close of work yesterday pickets chased a dozen workers as they left the mill but were halted by police after three blocks. One millman was reported beaten by the strikers.

William J. Long, strike leader, today challenged a statement by E. T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, that a majority of the employes wished to return to work.

Long said:

"We challenge Mr. Weir to call a mass meeting of the workers and put to them the question whether they want to go back without recognition of the union."

Jack Reese, chief picket at the Pope mill, sent a telegram in behalf of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, complaining against the company's attempt to operate with non-union men. Green replied he was laying the complaint before the National Labor Board.

No attempt has been made to operate any other than the Pope mill. Other plants in Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., continue idle with 10,000 workers on strike.

Miss Perkins Backs Shorter Work Hours

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The demands of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for shorter working hours and higher minimum wages than are now being incorporated in NRA codes, was given yesterday the direct support of Secretary Frances Perkins.

The cabinet member, whose appointment as Secretary of Labor the federation's high command had opposed only a few months ago, went before the annual convention of the organization with a stalwart demand for strengthening the voice of organized labor.

As the 500 delegates and their guests cheered, Miss Perkins said:

"We cannot stop with the present minimum wages and maximum hours of labor. We must go on with a unified purpose to an ever improving standard of living and assurance of economic security for all our people and sufficient leisure to enable us to enjoy the blessings which our resources and our equipment can make available to all of us."

Asserting "the voluntary organization of labor for mutual help, strength and experience will prove, under able leadership, to be a blessing," Miss Perkins disclosed for the first time that a division of labor service and labor standards was to be established in the Department of Labor with the full approval of President Roosevelt.

She said:

"The Department of Labor stands ready to carry its responsibilities in enlarging the opportunities for labor to enjoy a fair share of the hoped for national well-being. Not only must it make employers aware of the necessity for providing fully and equitably for the wage earners, but it must be ready to provide information, service and help to labor in its own program of solving problems and improving conditions for workers.

"These things can be achieved if industry recognizes that workers must receive increased wages and shorter hours of work in fair proportion as profits increase."

STORM MISSES MIAMI, HEADS TO SEA

Freak Twisters Hurt Two and Damage Buildings

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The tropical disturbance that brushed the lower Florida East Coast with strong winds early today apparently was central between Nassau and west end in the Bahamas Islands, presumably moving east northeastward at sea, this afternoon, Richard W. Gray, government metcoroligist here, said.

Offering no further threat to the lower Florida peninsula, the storm swung away from the coast to follow an easterly route usually taken by similar disturbances at this time of year.

Key West was the only Florida city to experience gale winds. Only minor property damage was reported there.

Two persons were injured here and one at Hollywood by small freak offshoots of the disturbance that damaged several buildings.

The highest steady winds reported here were 35 miles an hour from the north, with occasional gusts at 50.

The naval station at Key West received reports from naval vessels on patrol duty along the Cuban coast, near the center of the disturbance, that winds in the vicinity had reached as high as 100 miles an hour.

West Palm Beach schools were closed yesterday because of the approaching disturbance while business houses at Miami and other cities in the southern part of the state boarded up plate glass windows.

REVOLT, STORM RAGE IN CUBA

HAVANA, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Revolt flared in Camaguey province today as Atilano Sifontes, local leader, took up arms with a score of followers in a gesture of defiance from the hills near Camaguey.

The government lost no time in dispatching an army detachment on the trail of the rebels who were believed to have established headquarters somewhere in the wilds of the province.

Meanwhile, the storm which brought slight injuries to 20, sank small vessels in the Havana harbor and ended in an orgy of looting climaxed by the shooting of two looters, appeared today to have shifted its course over Camaguey.

DEATH CALLS TRAFFIC VET

Twenty-four hours after he reported off duty because of illness, Traffic Patrolman Harry Cashdollar, 48, stationed at Fourth avenue and Smithfield street, was dead today in his home, 1803 Behren way. Pneumonia was given as the cause of death.

Patrolman Cashdollar was a veteran traffic officer, having entered the service 22 years ago. He had directed traffic at almost every corner downtown and was widely known by motorists and business men.

Bridge to Close To Autos Tonight

The Smithfield Street bridge will be closed at 7 o'clock tonight to automobile traffic so that the floor may be replaced. Edward G. Lang, works director, says that the bridge will be closed to automobiles for approximately 24 days.

Pedestrian and street car traffic will not be affected.

DISTRICT CORPS WIN AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The crack drum corps from Marlboro, Mass., won the championship in the drum and bugle corps contest staged by the American Legion last night as a part of its convention activities. Uniontown, Pa., was second.

Uniontown scored 93.22 points, Marlboro had a score of 96.15; third place went to Laporte, Ind., 93.98, and fourth to Greensburg, Pa., 93.01. Tarentum, Pa., was fifth with 92.75.

Officials estimated that 40,000 persons, many of them members of state delegations, defied a stiff north wind for four hours as they cheered the corps during intricate formations and maneuvers that covered the length and breadth of newly laid football sod in Soldier Field Stadium.

In the matter of band contests the musicians representing the Blatz Post of Milwaukee were adjudged first. First place in drill team contests went to East Lynne, Mass.

WIFE IN ERIN, HUSBAND SUES

James O'Donnell, engineer at the Dixmont Hospital, today testified in his divorce suit against Mary Ann O'Donnell, now a resident of County Donegal, Ireland. She was notified through the consul general of the Irish Free State, but did not contest the action, the record disclosed.

O'Donnell told Judge W. Heber Dithrich he married a widow 10 years older than himself in 1908. They returned to Ireland five years ago where his wife bought a farm with his money, he related.

Later, he said, he was ordered off the place and came back to America. He crossed the ocean again to effect a reconciliation, but was spurned, he asserted.

Legion Opposes League And Debt Cancellation

Declares Against World Court, Soviet Recognition

By EUGENE J. CADOU
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Opposition to cancellation of war debts and to entrance of the United States into the League of Nations and the World Court was expressed on a resolution adopted by the fifteenth annual national convention of the American Legion here today.

The resolution said the Legion was against enrolling in the League of Nations and the World Court "with or without reservations." Only a few minutes before, the organization had voiced disapproval of recognition of Soviet Russia.

The Legion also "vigorously opposed the extension of credit or other financial aid by the government of the United States to the Communist Soviet government of Russia, its agents, or its subsidiaries whether directly or indirectly."

Reduction of immigration quotas by 90 per cent also was recommended.

B. W. Gearhart, California past department commander, proposed that the resolution be amended on the theory that the wording would destroy the Japanese and Chinese exclusion acts. The amendment carried.

Strengthening of the national defense also was demanded by the Legion in another resolution, which urged that an Army "divorced from politics" be increased to 165,000 regulars and 210,000 National Guardsmen.

Bringing the Navy up to treaty strength was another Legion proposal for national defense.

Combination of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps into a single bureau was opposed in another resolution.

Appointment of a law and order committee to make a study of the crime problem likewise was suggested. The legislatures of states were asked to prevent the sale of machine guns, sub-machine guns and lethal weapons.

Abolishment of an interest charge on all past and future loans on adjusted compensation certificates was demanded with hearty applause from the veterans.

Trying to See Game, Football Fan Falls

A football fan who attempted to scale the Boquet street wall at Forbes Field last night, according to police, fell 20 feet to the ground, suffering a probable fracture of the skull. He was Melvin Solomon, 19, of 421 Oak street, Braddock. He was taken to the Montefiore Hospital.

FATAL CANYON FIRE PROBED

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Persons responsible for the disastrous Griffith Park brush fire which cost at least 27 lives, and for ordering laborers into the fire-trap canyon, were sought in a three-fold investigation today.

With a promise that criminal prosecution will follow any evidence of negligence, District Attorney Buron Fitts assigned a deputy to attend the Coroner's inquest. At this hearing, scheduled for next Wednesday, a jury composed of fire experts, engineers and foresters, will hear evidence gathered by city, county and state investigators.

Coroner Frank Nance said today the exact death toll of Tuesday's fire in the box-like Mineral Wells Canyon may never be known. The latest report placed the missing at 62.

Police said Robert D. Barr, 29, an unemployed motion picture projectionist, who was arrested for suspicion of arson, did not cause the fatal blaze, although they said he admitted starting a fire in the park later in the evening.

ACHE MAY SAVE NUDE SALLY

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The pain Juror Joseph L. Meyers says he had in his head may have been just a headache to him, but to Sally Rand, the fan dancer, it may prove to be an asset.

It suggested the possibility that she may receive a new hearing on a charge of giving an indecent exhibition, for which she recently was sentenced to a year in jail and to pay a fine of $200.

The headache entered the litigation yesterday when Attorney Samuel Berke filed an affidavit by Myers, a member of the jury that convicted Miss Rand, saying he wished to acquit her, but was overwhelmed by the arguments of the other jurymen and was anxious to get out of the jury chamber because of his aching head.

The affidavit was used in support of a motion to set aside a previous order which denied the dancer a rehearing. Judge Joseph H. McGarry, of the Municipal Court, sustained the attorney's motion. He set October 31 for arguments on the question of a new trial.

ORATORS LOSE ELOQUENCE AT GENEVA

Complications That Prevent Accord Traced by Duce

By BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Premier of Italy
Special Cable

ROME, Oct. 5.—The lyric atmosphere which enveloped the Disarmament Conference in that now distant February, 1932, has almost entirely disappeared.

The first speakers at that time talked like inspired prophets and there was great expectancy among the peoples. All this has faded away during the passing of 20 useless months.

Speakers no longer talk. There is nothing more significant than the strike of League of Nations eloquence which has taken place at Geneva within the past few days. Out of 52 delegations which convened at the "Batiment electoral," none had anything to say.

The stock of parliamentarinism is at a low level, even in that sort of super-parliament which the annual assembly of the League of Nations has become.

Hope for Compromise

The peoples are no longer awaiting a miracle. They will be content if a compromise is reached. From poetry which would arouse hope we have now come to prose, worked out by statesmen with reinforcement from the experts.

This new situation should be noted. The disarmament craft is still far away from the harbor and can still go adrift for a new period of navigation of unforseen duration.

What are the causes leading to these prospects? The first is of general character and is represented by the extreme difficulties and complications of the problem. The famous Washington naval treaty involved only five powers, and it was not easy to conclude.

The eventual convention on disarmament ought to secure the adhesion of all states represented in the League of Nations, as well as acceptance by those which, like the United States and Russia, are not members of the Geneva institution.

Armaments Differ

The second motive is constituted by the different military character of each state. There are states which are prevalently naval, like England and the United States. There are others which are prevalently terrestial, like Russia; and there are others which possess impressive land, sea, and air forces.

Different valuation of the problem follows logically. As a rule, the states have shown themselves amenable in those armaments which are considered as rather auxiliary to their own military systems, and have been intransigent in the opposite case. It is clear and logical that England should look upon naval armaments with a different eye than upon land armaments.

Furthermore, alongside strictly military problems, there are also problems definable as "marginal," such as formations organized before and after regular military service, trained reserves, and colonial contingents. All this makes the problem more complex. Perhaps the problem in itself was put forth in aspects which were too broad.

There was an attempt to reach a general convention for disarmament, while there is not a question of disarmament, but solely one of reduction and adjustment of armaments, considering that there is a limit to this reduction which no state can surpass without exposing itself to serious dangers.

Prestige Suffers

After having placed the disarmament conference within the frame of the League of Nations—and perhaps it could not be done otherwise—it was clear that increased or diminished prestige of the league would be more or less happily influenced by the course of events.

As a matter of fact, the prestige of the league has received serious blows during these past 20 months.

Japan has withdrawn, and its attitude remains an unknown factor, even in the eventuality of a convention. The chronic conflict between Bolivia and Paraguay has been practically taken away from the league's jurisdiction. All this has served to put much lead in the wings of the Geneva doves.

But these, and other motives which we pass by in order not to make matters too long, would not be sufficient to explain the meager negative results of the work. The goal, after all, might be reached if there existed another factor of a political and moral character, namely, reciprocal understanding and mutual confidence among states and peoples. This is lacking and it would be an illusion to attempt to hide this fact.

Arms Pledges Not Kept

There is not favorable feeling between guardians of treaties and those forced to accept them. To be more specific, the vanquished states have well-groomed motives for this, since the Versailles treaty contemplated disarmament for

'Millionaire Dog' Loses Mansion, Put to Death

By BETTY SHANNON
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Tobey, the dog with the million-dollar playground, is dead.

The pet of Miss Ella Wendel, last of the Wendel line, has passed with the final closing of the gloomy mansion at Fifth avenue and Thirty-ninth street and the distributing of the $40,000,000 estate of its owner.

It was learned that last week the executors of the Wendel estate decided to put an end to Tobey's career rather than let him face the uncertainties of a future that might not always include silk pillows and the choicest food. Many people wanted to keep him, including Annie Gavin, Miss Ella's personal maid for 20 years, who has had the care of him since Miss Wendel's death.

But the executors last week decided to have him asphyxiated, and his body taken to the Wendel estate at Irvington-on-Hudson for burial. The executors thought, it is said, that they were carrying out what Miss Ella would wish. But Annie Gavin does not think this is so. She said:

"You couldn't believe that anyone could get so fond of a dog. Tobey was so smart—like a human being. He never could stand to be alone. He followed you around like a baby.

"Everybody knew him on the street. When I'd take him out, perfect strangers would say 'There goes that millionaire dog.' He liked being spoken to. And he liked little dogs. But he went after big ones."

NAZIS MUZZLE PRESS, DEATH DECREED

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The German government struck a death blow at the freedom of the press today in laws declaring journalists public officials and establishing the supreme penalty for German newspapermen who publish treasonable literature abroad or attempt to introduce such writings into their own country.

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, said:

"It is the absolute right of the state to supervise the formation of public opinion and see that it does not pursue paths leading away from the common weal."

In response to a Query, Goebbels said the new law would not affect foreign journalists in Germany, but only Germans or foreigners working for German papers.

Chancellor Hitler signed the measure when it was approved by the cabinet yesterday.

Under its stern provisions, ironclad rules were laid down for German journalism whereby Aryanism and Nazi patriotism were made primary professional qualifications.

Further, it was assumed by newspapermen although the text was not made public, that the "Aryan paragraph" barring persons with at least one Jewish grandparent from public office henceforth would be applied to journalists.

Explaining the new law, Goebbles said:

"The concept of the absolute freedom of the press is pronouncedly liberalistic and proceeds not from the people, in its entirety, but from the individual.

"The more freedom of opinion that is conceded to an individual the more it can harm the interests of the entire people.

"The conception of freedom of opinion in its absolute overestimate has been badly shaken throughout the world."

Goebbels said he considered it "grotesque" that states prevent quacks from maltreating their patients, yet permit journalistic quacks to tackle the diseased body politic.

He expressed the opinion that within five to seven years all the countries of the world will copy the German press law which he said did not mean fettering the newspaper man's calling but which substitutes the state for the publisher.

GERMAN COURT SNUBS HAYS

LEIPZIG, Germany, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The German Supreme Court today refused to grant Arthur Garfield Hays, American lawyer, an opportunity to defend himself against scathing attacks made against members of the London inquiry, particularly Hays, before the court in the Reichstag building fire trial today.

Hays no sooner had entered the courtroom upon his return from Paris, where he conferred with other members of the unofficial international commission which investigated the case at London, than Alfons Sack, a defense attorney, announced he regarded it as his duty to clear up the matter of whether Hays spoke to the Paris correspondent of the Moscow newspaper, Pravda, as he was quoted.

Previously Sack had told the court Hays was quoted as saying "the defense counsel in the Leipzig trial ought to seek to establish who the really guilty are and not only to unburden their defendants."

The court hearing the case in which five men are on trial charged with starting the fire last February, held a short conference and announced that there was "no reason to hear Hays." Sack then announced Hays was prepared to deny that he had spoken as he was quoted.

FRENCH DEFEND GERMAN JEWS

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

GENEVA, Oct. 5.—France joined Great Britain today in condemning Germany's attitude toward Jews and proposed concerted action against it.

Addressing the Minorities Committee of the League of Nations, Senator Henry Berenger proposed in the name of his country that action be taken to guarantee Jews equal treatment in all parts of the world. He suggested that the League of Assembly vote a resolution that all countries should be obliged to treat equally all inhabitants regardless of race, religion or origin.

His remarks supported those made yesterday by Great Britain's spokesman, who referred in sarcastic tones to the German talk about Aryanism and racial homogeneity. Berenger said:

"German Jews, who considered themselves Germans, have by government act been decreed a minority. Therefore they are entitled to the same treatment as other minorities."

He added that Germany could not continue to claim minority rights for Germans in other countries unless they accorded equal rights to Jews.

Italy Arrests Schoolmate of Il Duce as Spy

ROME, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini's schoolmate and old friend, Commendatore Donato Battelli, was reported arrested at Venice today charged with complicity in a spying plot, in which former Deputy Umberto Bianchi and about 13 others are involved.

The indictment charges specifically, it was reported here, that Battelli betrayed the trust and friendship of the head of the government by obtaining through him introductions to Italian military attaches abroad and, thereupon, obtaining and selling Italian military secrets by representing himself as intrusted with responsibility in promoting the Italian steel industry.

Battelli was born in Il Duce's home town, Forli, went to school with Mussolini, became his close friend and was the founder of the Republican party called the Gironda, which later passed into the ranks of the Fascists.

In recent years, he has lived in a middleclass apartment at Rome where the directory lists him as a publicist. He always has maintained the friendliest of relations with Il Duce.

The navy and air departments were reported to have taken charge of the initial judicial investigation before passing Battelli to the special tribunal for the defense of the state.

Dollfuss Assailant Proven Nazi Member

VIENNA, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The police announced today they had definitely established that the former army bugler, Rudolf Dertil, who attempted to assassinate Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, joined the Nazi party about a year ago.

Confronted with this evidence, Dertil admitted his former membership, the police alleged, but said he resigned six months ago. The official newspaper of the Fascist Heimwehr (pro-fascist government supporters) said Dertil joined the party Jan. 16, 1932, and got a membership card the following Feb. 2.

British Laborites Favor War Strike

HASTINGS, England, Oct. 5.—(INS.)—The British Labor party was unanimously on record today against participation in any future war. A resolution adopted at its annual conference threatened a general strike in the event of hostilities.

Should the Labor party regain its power in Britain, speakers promised, a law will be enacted legalizing pacifism except when British soil is invaded.

DUCE SEES HOPE OF DISARMING MIRACLE FADE

them and also disarmament in turn for the victors, who actually pledged themselves to carry this out.

This has not materialized. Some states affirm that this cannot be done, owing to the new situation that has arisen in Europe. Meanwhile, however, Germany has been accepted as a member of the league and has a permanent seat on the council; the Locarno pacts have been concluded with the German signature; Germany's right to arms parity was recognized in December, 1932, and, finally, she has signed the four-power pact.

The new situation was only a "potentiality" in 1932, when the right of parity was recognized. It became a "de facto" situation this year when the four-power pact was signed.

It is now difficult to uphold the thesis of discrimination in regard to Germany, and, on the other hand, the concern of others cannot be disregarded, if no other reason than from the phychological viewpoint. In order to overcome this double obstacle, I have not advanced a convention plan proper, as has been said, but a series of suggestions for arriving at practical conclusions, even though limited.

Mutual Distrust

These suggestions have been the object of active diplomatic conversations, both in Rome and Geneva, and might lead to an accord if it were possible to overcome the "moral" factor which makes one suspicious and distrustful of the other.

France already possesses formidable elements for her "security," represented by her military equipment, both fixed and mobile, and by the tradition and morale of her army and people, which would always rally to the call, should France be attacked. In this event, the guarantors of Locarno would also start to function.

Germany, in spite of certain untimely manifestations on the part of so-called "Unterfuhrer," spoke officially on May 17 through her chancellor and cannot think of war, unless under the penalty of new and perhaps irretrievable catastrophe.

Naziism is too fully occupied with domestic problems to think of adventures of a military nature. It is only by overcoming obstacles of a moral nature that it will be possible to arrive at—even on the basis of the pledge in the preamble of the four-power pact—a substantial agreement between the French and German theses, and, therefore, reach a preliminary convention on disarmament which, though it would not change the universe, would constitute a first step on a long, hard road.

Would Doom League

In order to realize the whole gravity and delicacy of the subject, it is also necessary for one to put before himself the unfavorable hypothesis, that is, failure, more or less elegantly camouflaged by the conference.

On that day, the League of Nations will have practically ceased to exist. New groups of states would be formed, differences would immediately become acute, and an era full of terrible uncertainties, even of a social character, would begin in the history of both Europe and the world.

This the reason why, regardless of everything, an agreement will be concluded.

KAMONS FACING NEW CHARGE IN FATAL FIRE

CLEVELAND, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The state will make a second attempt to try Louis J. Kamons, convicted Pittsburgh incendiary, in connection with the death of 12 persons in the Ellington Apartment fire in June, 1932.

After his trial on a murder charge in the death of Mrs. Clara Withers, one of the fire victims, was declared a mistrial yesterday, Common Pleas Judge Samuel H. Silbert announced that Kamons will be tried soon on the same charge in connection with one of the other deaths.

Albert H. Ball of Lakewood, one of the jurors, broke up the trial by telling the judge he had talked with Paul Childs of Pittsburgh, who also has been indicted for murder in the case, during a visit to the county jail. The judge told Ball:

"I ought to cite you for contempt of court and sentence you to jail and fine you, but in view of the fact that you appeared to have forgotten about your visit to the jail until I started instructing the jury, I'll let you off."

Swept Into Sea, Two Girls Drowned

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Two small girls drowned yesterday, swept out of a lifeboat which carried women and other children from a sinking Chilean steamer, the Valdivia, which went aground at Punta Grande.

Have a

Tyrolian

by

Mme. Marsi

If Madame Marsi, clever Viennese milliner, makes one of the chic Tyrolian hats for you, it will be so "native" that you will be tempted to yodel when you put it on. She will make it of the same fabric as your costume, or mold it out of a felt "hood."

This is just one of the peak-crown sports hats of the moment, which take talented hands to manipulate, and which Madame Marsi molds so skillfully to the head.

She is in our Millinery Salons for this week, only . . . Charges for her work are the same as our regular workroom prices, $5 to $7.50.

'FLAT WALLET ERA PAST' -JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Hugh S. Johnson directed the power of NRA's influence today toward a "buy now" campaign to speed the circulation of money and credit.

He addressed manufacturers and advertisers throughout the country, noting the end of the "flat wallet era" and urging full co-operation in the "now is the time to buy" drive officially set to start Monday.

Johnson's move to increase credit velocity was intended chiefly to help industry meet NRA's higher payrolls, but it blended smoothly with President Roosevelt's determined efforts to expand credit and boost farm prices.

Further, it coincided with the coming to Washington of Henry Bruere, president of the Bowery Savings Bank of New York, who boarded Mr. Roosevelt's train as it headed toward the White House from New York City. Bruere was expected to co-ordinate the entire credit expansion campaign.

Another step with the same aim was the government's request for bids on 844,525 tons of steel rails for 47 railroads. The Public Works Administration will lend the $25,000,000 or more buying price to the carriers.

United States, Bethlehem and Inland Steel and the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company were the concerns to which Joseph B. Eastman, railroad co-ordinator, addressed requests for prices. Later, a number of companies will bid on 245,221 tons of fastenings.

At NRA headquarters today, the wage and hour provisions of the Farm Administration's food and grocery code were opened for a public hearing. Consideration of the code's price fixing sections begins Monday before farm administrators.

Daladier Visits Herriot in Hospital

LYON, France, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Edouard Herriot and Edouard Daladier, statesmen who often have differed on many subjects, publicly clasped hands today as old friends when Daladier visited his predecessor in the premiership at a Lyon hospital.

Former Premier Herriot has been seriously ill since late in September. Daladier halted here on an air trip to Vichy to attend the opening of a four-day radical Socialist congress over which Herriot, as president, should have presided.

Balm Suit Against Dinehart Dropped

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Dismissal of the $250,000 breach of promise suit of Betty Kaege, of Chicago, against Allan Dinehart, movie actor and director, was ordered in Superior Court here today on the petition of Ben Ehrlich, of Chicago, counsel for the former Follies dancer.

HENRY AUSLANDER

PITTSBURGHER BRIDGE STAR

Henry Auslander, Pittsburgh real estate dealer, today learned he had the best individual record of the 400 bridge players who competed for the Pennsylvania championship last week in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Auslander lost the pair championship, he learned, by nine-tenths of a point. His partner was Al Roush, and in the four-team play, they tied for the lead, losing to the Milton Work team from Philadelphia in the play-off.

CHARGE STATE BANK LAXITY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Federal Judge George A. Welsh says the State Banking Department has been lax in failing to take measures to protect mortgage pools in closed trust companies in which millions of dollars have been invested.

Sustaining the appointment by the Federal Court of four receivers for two mortgage pools of more than $4,000,000 in possession of the closed Chester County Trust Company, at West Chester, Judge Welsh yesterday declared it is the department's duty to see that the pools are properly safeguarded.

The department sought to have the appointments set aside, contending that control of the pools should remain in its hands. Judge Welsh, however, ruled the department is a "mere custodian" of the pools because the securities in them are not the property of the banks.

BISHOP HAYES TAKING THRONE

HELENA, Mont., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Bishop Ralph L. Hayes, formerly of Beechview, Pittsburgh, today was to be enthroned as head of the Catholic diocese of Helena.

Although he doffed baseball garb many years ago, Bishop Hayes has lost none of his enthusiasm for the game.

Girl, 19, Casualty In Football Game

SAYRE, Pa., Oct. 5.—(INS.)—What price football feminism? Pennsylvania's first female football casualty, Gertrude Crane, 19, occupied a hospital cot today.

HONOR GIBBONS RESCUER

Morris Moses, of 1321 Beechwood boulevard, has been informed that a twice-decorated nephew was awarded the Silver Star "for gallantry in action" by the War Department.

A San Francisco attorney, the nephew, Cedric L. Brash, previously received the Croix de Guerre and the Purple Heart. He is credited with having carried Floyd Gibbons, wounded, from the battlefield at Bois de Belleau.

Brash was born in Australia and came to this country when a child. He enlisted with the Fifth Marines, when the United States entered the World War, and frequently was cited for bravery.

QUIZ LINKS BIG WALL STREET OPERATORS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Two of Wall street's best known market operators—Mathew C. Brush and Charles Hayden—were trustees of the United States and International Securities Corporation, an investment trust created by Dillon, Read & Co., it was revealed today at the Senate's market inquiry.

Robert Christie, Jr., a partner in Dillon, Read & Co., defended the selection of Brush and Hayden by his firm. He said they were familiar with securities and market operations.

QUESTIONS PRACTICE

Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, suggested their "judgment as trustees might be warped." Pecora pointed out that Hayden was a member of the brokerage firm of Hayden, Stone & Co., which floated and handled various types of securities, while Brush was a prominent speculator.

"Do you think it an ethical practice to name these men as trustees of an investment trust?"

"Yes, they are well-posted men—they have broad knowledge of the market."

Pecora delved into the sale by partners in Dillon, Read & Co. of a portion of the stock they held in the United States and Foreign Securities Corporation. In such deals, the partners rolled up a profit of $6,800,000.

TRACY CALLED

Christie revealed that 74,198 shares were sold for the partners by the brokerage house of Dominick & Dominick. Then the partners sold 46,354 shares direct to customers of their own banking house.

Pecora brought out that Dillon, Read & Co., had sold 11,000 shares to their customers for Dominick & Dominick. Pecora expressed surprise that the partners had sold this stock to Dominick & Dominick and then bought it back for sale to their own customers. Christie explained the demand of their customers had exceeded the supply which the partners wished to sell.

Then Pecora called Ernest Bell Tracy, president of the United States and Foreign and of the United States and International Securities Corporations, to the stand. Tracy said he received no salary for his offices but was given an option to buy United States and Foreign stock at $25 a share. This stock later went to $72, but is now $11.

PECORA TO RUN WITH M'KEE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate Banking Committee, decided today to run for district attorney for New York County on the ticket with Joseph V. McKee, independent candidate for mayor.

The foreign-born lawyer announced his decision today after a brief conference with members of the Senate committee, after several hours examination of witnesses in the protracted stock market investigation. Pecora said:

"I do not expect to do any campaigning in New York. I made a condition that the race should not interfere with my work with this committee. I made that a condition and it was readily accepted.

"I conferred with the committee and their opinion was that I should take the nomination because they feel that the active work of this investigation will be finishsd by the first of the year."

Pecora, accompanied by aides, received the congratulations of Clarence Dillon, head of the firm of Dillon, Read & Co., now being investigated as he walked from the committee room.

Viscount Cowdray, Publisher, Dies

LONDON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Viscount Cowdray, publisher of the now defunct Westminster Gazette, and reputedly very wealthy, died today at the age of 51.

M'CLURE CASE PLEAS ENTERED

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Eleven of 90 defendants today pleaded guilty in the Federal district court to charges of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law in Delaware County.

Their pleas came unexpectedly after a jury—the second to be chosen—had been sworn and Chet A. Keyes, special assistant attorney general had charged that a "setup or plant" had been attempted to get certain persons on the jury.

None of the 11 men who pleaded guilty was represented by counsel, and the 17 lawyers appearing for State Senator John J. McClure and the other defendants objected strenuously to the pleas.

DAVIS DEFENSE IN LOTTERY TRIAL OPENS

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Trial of United States Senator James J. Davis and Theodore G. Miller on federal lottery charges reached its third phase today when the defense of Miller rested. The defense of Davis began at once.

Albert J. Sartori, of Spokane, Wash., a former member of the supreme council of Moose, was the Senator's first witness.

Sartori testified that "in the 17 years I have known Senator Davis he has always stood for the finest in fraternal life." He said Davis "opposed punchboards and such things."

At the conclusion of Davis' first abortive trial, a year ago, he issued a statement in which he deplored the mistrial, saying "I was looking forward to the opportunity to take the stand." His attorneys have declined to discuss that statement.

DAVIS 'SPIRITUAL CHIEF'

Asked if the Moose officers intended to give awards in the Moose charity balls on the basis of lot or chance, Sartori testified:

"The thought never entered our heads."

He was questioned about the gift by Moose of $125,000 to Davis through the organization department of Moose. The government had brought this evidence out to support its contention that Davis owned the organization department at the time it received some of the profits from the alleged lotteries.

Sartori, repeating the proceedings of a Moose council meeting, said:

"Somebody said Senator Davis had been more or less holding the bag for the order and ought to be reimbursed through the organization department."

"Do you know of a single instance when Senator Davis issued an order as director general?"

"He did not."

BARES INFLUENCE

Later Sartori explained Davis as:

"Always our spiritual leader."

The position of director general, he said, was honorary.

Cross-examined by Louis Mead Treadwell, the witness agreed Davis had influence in the order, but said, "he was always a gentleman about it."

SUNDAY SUN-TELEGRAPH

Star's Courage Boon To Film Morality

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Miss Ruth Chatterton has decided not to play the part of a harlot on the screen.

This is a very radical decision at a time when the screen offers the patient public little else than a variety of harlots' parts—but a very commendable decision.

The decision may keep Miss Chatterton off the screen for awhile, but in the end it must prove not only of moral but of financial advantage.

The public is going to get tired of harlots some time. Even the producers may some time have resourcefulness enough to think of some other kind of a part for men than a gangster, and some other kind of a part for women than a harlot.

But even if the playgoing public is by this time thoroughly debauched and fails us, and even if the producer, after doing his best to lift himself to a higher level, cannot think of anything more spiritual than a harlot, we still have the great silent masses, the one-time moral masses of America, to fall back on.

There will surely soon be a revolution against the degeneracy, the immorality, the indecency of the stage and the screen.

There will surely some day be established an effective federal censorship of activities which invade every household and exercise a determining influence on the character of the whole people, but particularly of the young.

Are we going to allow our young people to be educated to admire gangsters and harlots?

Are we going to teach them that there is very little of interest in life except evil?

Why have churches—why have schools—and then let the screen, the greatest educator of all, undo the work of the churches and of the schools, and teach crime and licentiousness as the only worth-while subjects of knowledge and interest?

Can we not recover our one-time sound and sturdy American moral standard, which we proudly maintained before we were debased by the European moral standard, and the Oriental and the African unmoral standards?

Can we not have an NRA for the screen and the stage to compel these great influences to do their duty by society?

Maintaining the morality of a nation is a proper governmental function.

There never was a degenerate nation morally which did not become a degenerate nation in every other physical and spiritual aspect.

There never was a nation which failed in moral fibre which did not soon fail in the fibre of patriotic manhood, in the ability to maintain and defend its national ideals, and eventually its national independence.

But our nation is not a degenerate nation, and our greatest obligation to ourselves and to the world is to see that it does not become so.

It is a duty of government. Let government do its duty.

Let it enable ourselves and our families to see something else on the screen except harlots in the morning, strumpets at noon, and courtesans at night.

When an American husband takes his family to the theater, he ought to be certain that he is not taking them to a house of ill fame.

AN AMERICAN HUSBAND.

DO A CROSS-STITCH NOSEGAY

CROSS-STITCH MOTIFS PATTERN 560

By LAURA WHEELER

We may scorn many of the ideas of Early Victorian days, but when it comes to the lovely, quaint floral motifs that were so popular with the needlewoman of that day, we agree entirely with her taste and so decorate our footstools and pillows with them, just as she did. This quaint cross-stitch nosegay of old-fashioned flowers is to be done in a variety of colors, each flower being embroidered in at least two different shades. The crosses, being of a good size, make embroidering easy. The large motif is suitable for a footstool or pillow top and is most striking done in wool. The smaller motifs can be used either in combination with the larger one, or separately, as illustrated.

Pattern 560 comes to you with the transfer pattern of one large motif 7x9 inches, four small motifs 2½ inches square, a color key to follow when embroidering, and directions and yardages for making the articles shown.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Winter Brings With It Danger of Gas Poisoning

This is the time of year when every housewife should insist upon a careful inspection of all coal and gas stoves, gas tubing, gas jets and chimney flues. Defective tubing and leaking stoves should be repaired to prevent gas poisoning. This is a serious health menace which is too often overlooked and neglected.

Dr. Copeland

May I warn you against danger? I want to stress the importance of safeguarding against gas poisoning. It is a common accident that sometimes proves fatal. In most instances the calamity could have been prevented.

Gas poisoning results from the inhalation of carbon monoxide. This is one of the most deadly gases known to mankind. It is found in natural gas, coal gas, illuminating gas and in the exhaust of automobiles. When inhaled, the blood undergoes sudden and serious chemical changes.

The poison strikes rapidly and unfortunately causes severe damage to the body within a very short time. This danger is great since the victim may be breathing the deadly gas while asleep. It is only when the escaping gas is detected that the sufferer may be aroused and saved from its deadly effects.

In former years little was known about the treatment of carbon monoxide, or gas poisoning. We are indebted to the World War for our present knowledge. Gas poisoning is a common accident of modern warfare and military surgeons have succeeded in cures that in former years were unknown.

In all cases of gas poisoning it is best to secure immediately the services of a physician. Improper handling or unfamiliarity with the condition may lead to serious complications. Until the physician arrives, clear the room of the gas and allow the sufferer to have as much fresh air as possible. Keep him well covered with blankets. A good plan is to place hot water bags to his feet.

Do not move the victim or allow him to walk. It is best to leave the patient in a recumbent position. Any slight exertion may damage the heart.

It is often necessary to resort to the use of artificial respiration. This is essential if there is difficulty in breathing. At times oxygen and carbon monoxide tanks are needed to save the life of the victim. Most municipalities and large cities are equipped with the proper machines for this method of resuscitation.

Like many other serious menaces to life and health, carbon monoxide poisoning is far easier to prevent than cure. As I have said, it is advisable to check carefully on leaky gas and stove pipes, tubing and jets. Prompt repairs will prevent gas leakage and danger to your health.

There's no reason why you shouldn't enjoy the smooth, smart performance of your Chevrolet right through the winter if you protect the cooling-system from freezing and rust.

It's easy to do, because the finest anti-freeze you can buy is also the most economical. A gallon of Eveready Prestone now costs only $2.95! And that's all it takes to protect any Chevrolet to zero. For other makes, see your dealer's chart.

Eveready Prestone won't boil away during warm spells and have to be replaced. It won't break down and cause rust, clogging and overheating, as many anti-freezes do after part of a season's driving. only problem would be to find money to meet payrolls and brains to direct industrial enterprises. The latter cannot be provided by "penalties."

Mr. Dillon, head of Dillon, Read and Company, a firm issuing securities, had just told how stocks bought for twenty cents a share had been sold for $72. The public, of course, paid the $72. Distinguished bankers paid the twenty cents.

Dillon also, with a smile that could melt even Senator Couzens, told how, with five million dollars, his associates got control of trusts capitalized at ninety million dollars.

LONG AGO, in the days before 1929, this column repeated several times:

"If you want to gamble, gamble for yourself. Why hand your money to investment trusts and let other people gamble with it?"

Millions that paid no attention regret it now. And, when gambling starts again, as it will, they will pay no attention to similar advice. Each child must be burned to know that fire is real.

VIRGINIA VOTES against prohibition, national as well as state. Even Bishop Cannon's home town goes wet. Thirty-two states in succession have voted against prohibition, not one in favor of it.

Prohibition came in with wartime hysteria. It goes out with painful prohibition experience. Sincerity was back of prohibition, common sense was not. Extremists should have read and taken Thomas Jefferson's advice.

WHAT IS your oat crop per acre? The Seattle Post-Intelligencer says Edward Affolter, of Long Mont, Col., has taken 803 bushels of oats, 107 bushels per acre, from seven and a half acres. That amazes the little farmer proud of 40 or 50 bushels an acre.

Mr. Archie Dingwall, who runs the Burlington Journal, published weekly in "the heart of the rich Skagit Valley," in the state of Washington, says:

"One hundred and seven bushels of oats per acre is no more than average in Skagit County. And one Skagit County acre yielded close to one hundred and eighty bushels, close to the world's record of 187 bushels."

Just now when government is persuading everybody to produce less and increase prices, great yields are not appreciated as they will be later, when men learn to distribute products intelligently.

OUR GOVERNMENT, which is able to find billions in a desert of depression, proposes to lend money to business men operating under NRA requirements, and three per cent interest is suggested.

If this is done on a big scale what will happen to banks and others whose profession is lending money, at more than three per cent.

Some say "banks don't lend anyhow," but they are mistaken. Banks lend when they are SURE to get their money back with interest.

BAER'S UNCLE SOCKS 'SOCKER'

DENVER, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Max Baer, heavyweight pugilist, might well envy the right hand wallop his uncle, Benjamin F. Baer, a Denver policeman, possesses.

Officer Baer arrested John King, 22, as a robbery suspect. Tony Sisco, who said his store was robbed, walked up to King and struck him, without warning.

Officer Baer immediately swung an uppercut that caught Sisco on the chin and knocked him out.

SLEEP MALADY BRINGS 'CURES'

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Hundreds of persons, described by Dr. Paul J. Zentay, assistant health commissioner, as "well meaning individuals," still are sending in "causes" and "cures" for the fast-waning sleeping sickness epidemic.

Among the causes advanced by letter writers are automobile exhaust gas, repeal of prohibition, insects, animals and African missionaries. Cures offered included serums, occultism and cure-alls.

HEARST BONDS TO BE RETIRED NOVEMBER 1

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5.—Funds are now on deposit in readiness for the retirement on November 1 next of a block of $1,000,000 6¼ per cent serial gold bonds of Hearst Publications, Inc., an affiliate of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., and the payment of $500,000 semi-annual interest on the outstanding issue, it was announced today by the executive offices of the Hearst corporation.

In addition to this major financial operation involving payment of $1,500,000, the New York Evening Journal, also a subsidiary of Hearst Consolidated, will redeem on December 1, $1,000,000 of its 1933 maturities of 6¼ per cent serial gold bonds and at the same time distribute $192,187.50 semi-annual interest.

The third important financial undertaking of the current year was completed on March 1, last, when Hearst Magazines, Inc., retired $1,000,000 of its maturing obligation.

Hearst securities have established an impressive record for prompt and uninterrupted payment of dividends, bond interest and maturities on all issues in the hands of the public.

Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., has maintained regular quarterly cash dividends on its issue of class "A" 7 per cent cumulative participating preferred shares. The third quarterly dividend for 1933 was distributed on September 15, which was also the thirteenth consecutive payment since these shares were originally offered.

This illuminating financial record is made more impressive in view of the chaotic world-wide financial conditions during the last four years and is further evidence of the stability and essential character of the publishing industry in the economic life of the nation.

LIBBY GREETS STAGE PALS; 'NO PLANS'

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Libby Holman—or Mrs. Smith Reynolds—(call her either one, say her managers) still has "no plans" about a return to Broadway.

At the office of Walter Batchelor, her agent, the word today was:

"Absolutely no plans. Nothing at all. She doesn't know what she will be doing. She isn't even considering doing anything. No plans."

And, like the Shakespearean lady who protested too much, the announcement sent a rumor running up and down the twinkling lane that Libby Holman would be back—soon.

GREETS OLD FRIENDS

It had been a nebulous sort of rumor for three days, ever since Libby, the old sparkle back in her eyes and her eager hand outstretched to her stage friends, showed up at the opening of a new revue.

Especially did the wiseacres nod when Libby went back stage to congratulate her old partner, Clifton Webb. They said "the bug" was getting her again. She laughed, shook her head.

"No plans."

Still, it was no secret when she refused to go into a new musical show this fall, a refusal that, coupled with Webb's present engagement, caused the producers to call off the venture.

REFUSED OFFERS

It was no secret when she similarly was cold to the overtures of George White.

She said definitely she would not be in those shows.

Broadway has never believed Libby Holman's husky voice was to be heard no more in the darkened theaters of New York's Main Street.

They read her announcement that she would devote herself exclusively to her child with cynical smiles. But there was no sign from Libby that she missed the old life. She stayed in seclusion in Wilmington, Del., and this summer at Watch Hill, R. I.

Now that she has come to New York, tried her wings a little—the first time since her husband's violent death and the birth of her son, the Reynolds heir—Broadway is confident. Libby has gone back to Delaware, but only, they say, for a little while.

Butter in Well Keeps for 21 Years

OTTAWA, Kan., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—W. S. Chambers plans to look into his well a little oftener. While having it cleaned he found a pound of butter in an air tight crock which had been placed under the water for refrigeration 21 years ago. It apparently was in good condition.

Toeless Chickens Trailed by Deputy

PHONE CALLS SHOW INTEREST IN RECIPES

One evidence that the Sun-Telegraph-Prudence Penny favorite recipe contest has excited the keen attention of the women of Pittsburgh and vicinity is the number of telephone calls pertaining to the contest received at this office every day. And, by the way, Mrs. R. S. Ardary, of 411 Lloyd street, Pittsburgh, calls attention to an error in the printing of her prize-winning recipe for "Chow-Chow." It should have read "stir in two quarts of boiling vinegar" instead of "water." Yes, that should make a better chow-chow.

The Sun-Telegraph is awarding $15 in cash prizes every day for the favorite recipes of the housewives of Pittsburgh and vicinity. The one recipe considered by the judges to be the best for the day is awarded $5—10 others get $1 each.

If you have a home recipe of your own that your friends have tried and asked for, send it to Prudence Penny, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. It may win a prize. And if it does win and is printed it will be a valuable aid to other housewives in their daily problem of home cooking. The judges who award the daily prizes are Chef de Cuisine Louis Jousse, Hotel Schenley, and Camille Mauclair, Chef de Cuisine of the Hotel William Penn.

THURSDAY'S $5 PRIZE WINNER

Mix ½ teaspoon mustard with enough brown sugar to cover ham. Spread over fat side of ham. Add ½ cup vinegar to water for baking. Baste ham frequently. Bake until tender. The above is for half of an ordinary sized ham. A thick slice of ham may be baked in this way for a small family.

TEN PRIZES OF $1 EACH

MRS. J. H. GRIFFITH,

GRAPE CONSERVE

Three pints of grapes.
Two oranges (rind and pulp).
One-half pound seeded raisins.
Two cups English walnut meats.
Eight cups of sugar.
One-half pint of water.
Pulp grapes, cook and remove seeds. Then add oranges which have been put through a food chopper, skins of grapes, raisins, also ground; sugar and water. Cook 30 minutes after it begins to boil. Add walnuts, also chopped, when taking conserve from the fire. Has an especially fine flavor during the winter.

MRS. F. J. WILLIAMS,

LEMON VELVET

One cup sugar.
Three tablespoons cornstarch.
One tablespoon butter.
One cup boiling water.
One lemon (rind and juice).

Add butter and cook over water to thicken. Cool. Add lemon, grated rind and juice, stiffly beaten egg whites and whipped cream. Pour into freezing tray and freeze until solid.
This recipe may be changed in flavor by adding one-half of the lemon juice called for and add the juice of one orange. The pulp of a banana will also give it a banana flavor if desired. In using the banana, however, neither lemon or orange is required.

CLEAR GREEN SWEET MEATS
(Ante-Bellum Recipe)

Select thick watermelon rinds, cut or carve into shapes as fancy and beautiful as possible. Drop into brine as soon as cut. They can remain in brine until you are ready to use them. When ready soak the rind in clear water until it is free from salt, put it in a bright brass kettle (if you have it, otherwise a porcelain-lined one) of cold water, and boil until it is a bright green, having a lump of alum size of a walnut, or if loose, about a tablespoonful in the water. When clear, put them in a vessel of cold water and let them stand all night. In the morning put them in a kettle of cold water and boil for one and one-half hours. Drain off the water and boil again in cold water for a while. Take them out and let them cool again, while you prepare the syrup. In the last boiling, have a dozen or two pieces of white ginger. To each pound of rind allow one and three-quarters or two pounds of sugar, one and one-half quarts water, four or five pieces of mace, the ginger previously used, one lemon (to two pounds) sliced with seeds out. Boil till sugar is dissolved. Then put rind in and boil till a straw can be run through the rind. Put in jars and do not use for two months. Many prefer the ginger flavor high.

MRS. LOUIS BLEIFUS,
205 West Beau street,
Washington, Pa.

Jangled nerves bring words that hurt

Suppose a hidden phonograph were taking down your words all during the day. How often would you be embarrassed and shocked at the things you may have said under the stress of jangled nerves?

A sharp word, a fit of temper, an unfair accusation—these hurt your friends and your loved ones—and they hurt you, too.

Watch your nerves. Get your full amount of sleep every night. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation. And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

How long can you point at a mark on the wall without consi[illegible]able wavering? Here's a sure way to show up [illegible]rves. It's used by many well-known doctors. A g[illegible]d score is two full minutes.

U. S. SPURS QUIZ OF REPEAL PROBLEMS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Spurred by Virginia's thumping majority in favor of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and substitution of a liquor control law for her bone-dry statute, numerous Federal agencies today hurried studies they have been making in anticipation of repeal.

The Department of Justice alone has put 19 questions to a corps of attorneys for answers.

Administration officials who have predicted that repeal would be here on December 6 are trying to have the government ready to deal with problems that will be raised by repeal, among them:

Keeping the pledge the party made that states which desired to remain dry would be protected by the federal government from neighboring wet states.

Creation in the District of Columbia of a model liquor control system as an example to the states.

Assurance of as much revenue as possible to the government without bringing back bootleggers.

Frankly confessing that they have not answered all their 19 questions, Department of Justice officials expressed the view that laws remaining on the books would be sufficient to protect dry states.

LIQUOR AD LISTS REPEAL PRICES

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The first advertisement since prohibition addressed to the general public by a liquor dealer, listing famous brands and quoting prices, appeared in morning newspapers in this city today.

The advertisement, occupying a full page and headed "for delivery promptly if and when repeal comes," quoted Black and White Scotch whisky, Johnny Walker, and Haig and Haig at $25 a case of 12 bottles, plus $14.77 a case for import duties and federal taxes. House of Lords gin will be sold at $20 a case, with a similar tax. Martell 3-Star cognac is quoted at $35 a case, with the same tax.

All the standbys of pre-prohibition days appear in the advertisement. Sixteen-year-old American whisky is priced at $68 for a case of 12 quarts, with a tax of only $3.30 because it is a native product.

The advertisement stresses the fact that the taxes quoted are "present" taxes, implying that there may be increases when repeal becomes effective.

Coincident with the announcement, 500 cases of 3-Star Hennessy arrived in New York on the liner Lafayette, in bond for a distributor. It was the first consignment to reach the United States in expectation of repeal.

N. Y. State W.C.T.U. Holds Convention

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—With "the new crusade" as the slogan, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the state of New York met here today in annual convention.

Meeting when only four more states are needed for repeal of the prohibition amendment, the program calls for the laying of new plans to continue the fight for suppression of the liquor traffic.

It was at Fredonia, in this county, that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was born in December, 1873.

Missouri Governor Urges State Repeal

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Repeal of the Missouri prohibition law and enactment in its place of legislation to regulate the liquor business in the event of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment was recommended by Gov. Guy B. Park yesterday in calling the Legislature to meet October 17.

The Executive recommended an increase in the present beer tax and a general sales tax.

Second Man Dies After Gas Blast

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Howard Carner, 24, chemist, died early today, the second victim of an explosion of gasoline vapor in five 11,000-gallon tanks belonging to the Phillips Pipe Line Company.

Charles Barefoot, 34, another chemist, risked his life and lost, when he climbed to the top of one of the tanks and shut off a valve, preventing the further spread of the flames. A sheet of flame caught him as he descended and he died last night. Company officials said he probably saved a number of lives by his action.

Hollywood's Famous Reducing Formula Now Available to the Public.

To take off fat—and know you are not injuring your health is what made HOLLYWOOD 18 so successful. And now, by popular demand, you, too, can reduce with the original HOLLYWOOD 18 formula, just like so many overweight movie stars use, who must constantly keep their trim, lovely figures.

Many report weight reductions from 14 to 41 pounds and it's so easy and pleasant—you just take a little HOLLYWOOD 18 in a glass of water before breakfast. Just ask Mayflower, Economy, Sun, Peoples, or any good druggist for HOLLYWOOD 18.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Let's hear how you are helping others, fellows!

Junior found a way to not only help his pals and to help Officer Nolan when he caught one of the boys who had been stealing milk, but he found a way to help the families who really owned the milk.

It's a good idea to be honest, fellows. Dishonesty just doesn't pay, no matter how clever you are. Sooner or later, someone smarter than you will put glue on the milk bottles if you try to steal them, just like Junior did for that kid Butch sent to steal milk from Junior's mother.

Fellows, don't forget the radio programs Wednesday afternoons. Write and tell us how you like them. Captains, why not call your club meeting together while the Junior Patrol is on the air, so that you can all listen to the program together? Soon, too, we are going to have an orchestra to play for the programs.

Marilyn Harshman, of 736 Evans avenue, Ingram, says that she is now captain of a patrol with three members. That's a good start, Marilyn, and now you only need seven more members to be elected a real Junior Patrol captain of a Patrol with 10 members.

Then we will send you the black and orange armband.

Get agter your friends — get them to send in their pledges right now. They'll be glad they joined, and you can all start having fun together and helping others.

Jean Miller, of West Penn Sub, Jeannette, Pa., sends a letter giving a roll of 10 names. But she doesn't send pledges, and they are important. Send in pledges for your friends, Jean.

Now here's a note from Edwin Kwiatanowski, of 805 Melrose avenue, Ambridge, Pa. He wants to start a patrol in Ambridge but he only has six members. You only need four more now, Edwin, and we're sure you have lots more friends. Or else your members have friends. That's one of the swellest things the Junior Patrol does. It gets more fellows and girls all over this district acquainted with lots of the others. A friend introduces one of his friends to another friend, and before you know it, you have hundreds more friends! That's the idea of the Junior Patrol. We want all the Junior Patrol members to be a big club of friends.

A Negro who made his home with the McCalebs is being sought.

Babette's News

Whoop-la! How to keep one eye on arriving shipments and one ear to the ground for fashion whisperings, without turning contortionist—that's m' problem. And the problem's doubled when I'm concentrating on those elusive Somethings known as accessories. But if you think it isn't worth it—look! Gloves are decidedly there when it comes to glamour. Handbags grow more accommodating every day. Jewelry is so barbaric you can almost hear the tom-toms. But, to be specific:

Go ahead, laugh! Of course they're silly. But don't you love 'em, just because they are? Patou showed them with most of his evening gowns at the Openings. They're of kid, with tiny-flower perforations, and insets of elastic to make them hug the wrists. Pink, blue, white, green, yellow or black. Match them to your evening gown . . . and see what a sensation you'll be at the first "formal." 4.00 a pair.

Handbags have at last up and proved that they can grow big without being awkward about it. Witness the one above, practically elephantine. When, compact, cigarette case and all the etceteras share the same lodging, the outcome is doubtful. This has enough compartments to keep peace in the pocketbook! 5.00—in black or brown suede or wool . . . black, oxford or brown.

These will bring out the actress in you... they're that dramatic! Maybe even the siren (who knows?) They're completely fingerless . . . made of rich black suede, accented with gold kid (everywhere, everywhere that metallic gleam!) Sure to revive that tired glamour of yours. And for 5.00!

I always thought that barbarians and opulence were at opposite ends of the world, so to speak. Yet along comes the Barbaric-theme in jewelry to complement the Glamour-theme in clothes. Well, let's not quibble—since the barbaric jewelry is worth a few hoo-rahs. The choker above or the matching hour-glass bracelet, 2.00. Take a tip from your new Vogue, "Better than one bulky barbaric bracelet are two identical bulky barbaric bracelets—one to be worn on each arm."

Just why you should want to see the time when you are out party-ing is more than I can figure out . . . but that seems to be the idea of these new kid gloves. They crush down negligently about the wrist, so that the opening reveals your watch. Except for that drawback, they're very nice. Made of a soft, fine kid in blue, cameo and white. 5.50's the price.

Perhaps you'll prefer Lelong's Spiral Jewelry. It, too, has a slightly barbaric tang. There are bracelets, clips, button earrings, rings and pins—prystal, or made to resemble amethyst, jade, amber, or other stones. I like the big blobs of clips which (Vogue, again!) you wear this year at the base of your throat or the back of your neck. Bracelet or clip sketched, 1.25.

POLICE ACCUSED BEFORE VOTE PROBERS

Witness From Strip Says Sleuths Tried To 'Railroad' Him

A judge of a Strip election board who refused to use paper ballots on primary day, charged before the Harris Investigating Committee that city police have already tried to "railroad" him to the workhouse because of his opposition to the organization candidates and ward leaders.

This was one of the insights toward politics given the members of the committee when they heard more than a score of witnesses yesterday recite their experiences with the voting machines September 19.

It also was testified that city police, deputy sheriffs and other "payrollers" ordered election boards to quit using the voting machines and go over to paper ballots, even though the machines were functioning properly.

Tonight the committee will meet in McKeesport to hear complaints from persons in that city. The session will begin at 8 o'clock on the sixth floor of the People's Bank Building.

'SCRAP THEM ALL!'

Stephen Maciborski, of 2812 Penn avenue, judge of election in the First District of the Sixth Ward, told the committee that he defied city police and refused to use paper ballots primary day. He said the one machine in his district worked perfectly. Maciborski declared that last Thursday he was arrested by police when he stepped into a store in Penn avenue. He was charged, he said, with keeping a disorderly house, when he has nothing to do with the establishment. He said he has appealed the case.

Maciborski presented a large number of affidavits of persons who declared they voted for Ralph H. Smith for judge, when the return sheet only totaled 21 votes for Smith. A check is to be made of the machine. Maciborski's story was corroborated by Alderman Luke J. Sullivan who said he believed the machine had been tampered with before it was delivered to the election board. He suggested to the committee that they "scrap the entire lot of voting machines."

TAMPERING CHARGED

Maciborski said that a city employe, a Negro, demanded assistance in voting, stating he had left his glasses at home and could not read the print. Maciborski refused to give assistance and the "payroller" went into the machine to vote. Maciborski stated the man remained behind the curtains more than 40 minutes and when he came out he had his glasses on his forehead. A short time later Maciborski declared he found the Judge Smith button did not work. It later was put back in working order.

Assistant City Solicitor Charles Lang and a city fireman named Martin were named as having ordered the election board of the

Leaders Here Hopeful After U. S. Hearing On Project

City officials, who attended yesterday's hearing on flood control before the Drainage Area Board in Washington, are confident today the emergency Public Works Administration will finance Pittsburgh's flood control project calling for $51,000,000.

Representing the city yesterday were Mayor John S. Herron, Public Works Director Edward G. Lang, Engineer Ross M. Reigel and Councilmen Frank L. Duggan and Clifford B. Connelley.

Director Lang said the hearing was "the most encouraging" he had ever attended. Lang said, although Charles H. Paul, Dayton, O., chairman of the Drainage Area Board, did not say the administration would finance the flood project, his unusual interest and understanding of the project led Lang to believe he would approve it.

EARLY CONSIDERATION

Councilman Connelley and Engineer Riegal also expressed encouragement. Connelley said:

"I think we will get something for flood control. If we do not get the entire sum I'm sure we'll get a part of it. Yesterday's hearing was most satisfactory."

Riegel said he expects the drainage board to report on the project within two weeks.

GUFFEY HEADS GROUP

In addition to Pittsburgh officials, more than 100 representatives of municipalities in the tri-state district, headed by Joseph F. Guffey, Pennsylvania Democratic leader, were present at the hearing. Guffey told the board important areas in five states would be benefited if federal authorities adopted the project.

Gov. Pinchot, who had flown from Harrisburg to attend the hearing, added his indorsement and urged the federal works administration to finance the entire project.

Mellons, Backing Regular Slate, Contributed Also to Independent

ANDREW W. MELLON

$750 Gift by Family To Schramm Fund Revealed

The Mellon family may have liked the Regular Republican campaign committee's slate to the tune of jointly contributing $6,000, but that did not deter them from showing a little independent politics in the primary election.

Mayor John S. Herron and his Council slate held their undivided support, but when it came to the new Juvenile Court judgeship, both sides shared in the Mellon contribution to Pittsburgh's political life.

According to the expense account on record today for Gustav L. Schramm, who won the Democratic nomination for Juvenile Court, the Mellons contributed a total of $750 to opposition to the regular organization's candidate, Charles G. Lane, Jr. Lane won the Republican nomination.

W. L. Mellon contributed $500 toward Schramm's race, while A. W. and R. B. Mellon jointly gave $250. H. C. McEldowney, president of the Mellon-controlled Union Trust Company, gave Schramm a $25 contribution and the regular Republican ticket $500.

PROBE REPORT GIVEN COUNTY HEADS

Pages Torn and Books Altered, Inquiry Discloses

Records in the office of Coroner William J. McGregor have been lost, pages torn out of important record books and erasures made on sheets showing the money received for embalming bodies, auditors for Main & Co. informed the County Commissioners today.

The report was immediately made public by the Commissioners today.

In the report, submitted by M. C. Conick, Harry T. Ewing, former chief deputy in the office, is reported as having accused the present chief deputy, James L. Davidson, of having removed certain pages from office books and of having made erasures in receipts of $10 embalming fees.

EWING CHARGES

Conick said the audit of the Coroner's office was made after Ewing in a written statement charged that:

1—Embalming fees collected by the office were diverted to other than proper uses.

2—Personal expenses of the Coroner, loans to the Coroner and other unofficial items were paid from the funds so diverted.

3—Alterations and erasures were made in the books of original entry to cover up such diversions.

5—Fees paid to the office of the Coroner for his transcripts of testimony given before the Coroner or his deputies were diverted.

Conick said there is no way in which an accurate check can be made on transcripts purchased and this item was not investigated.

Conick said he found the receipt books for embalming fees received were missing prior to July 1927, and that Coroner McGregor said he was unaware that they had been missing.

The report states that Mr. Davidson and John P. Black, superintendent of the morgue, stated the books had been damaged by water prior to removal of the morgue in 1929 and that they were then destroyed. Ewing, however, has told the auditors the books were on hand in February, 1930.

ERASURES MADE

The auditors report that in many instances in the years 1927 to 1926, other morgue books show where the notation "$10 received for embalming" had been originally entered, an erasure had been made and the words "none" or "no charge" written in. Erasures appeared on 235 cases, the report states.

Mr. Ewing had furnished the auditors with a list of 56 cases where he charged the money had been diverted. A checkup of the cases, auditors reported, showed that in 53 of the cases, erasures had been made on the morgue records.

Ewing also presented a list of 135 cases, on which records were missing. No satisfactory explanation could be obtained on how the records were missing.

The auditors also presented a schedule of 82 cases where morgue books indicate payment of the embalming fee, but which fee was not remitted to the County Treasurer.

DIVORCEE SUES FOR CHILD

Helen Klein, 218 North Linden avenue, whose husband, Daniel Klein, 5528 Stanton avenue, recently obtained a second divorce from her, has filed habeas corpus proceedings to obtain possession of their daughter, Marjorie, 7.

She charges that the girl is being deprived of her liberty and is unlawfully detained by the father. Judge W. Heber Dithrich fixed October 13 for the hearing.

Klein had possession of his daughter when Judge John P. Egan granted him a divorce.

OFTEN HIT HER, WIFE SAYS

Her husband accused her of marrying him for his money, but never gave her any, Marguerite McCready, 5810 Hays street, testified yesterday in her divorce action against Harrison R. McCready, Pittsburgh playboy of Fox Chapel Manor.

Mrs. McCready in relating to the court, details of their frequent spats, following their marriage, December 31, 1931, testified:

"He called me a gold digger, but never gave me a penny in the two months I lived with him. If I wanted to go to a movie I had to use my own money. Once while shaving he struck me with the shaving brush. I got soap in my mouth and eyes."

The libellant claimed that on one occasion while she was talking to a friend on the telephone he said she was talking too long and told her to go home. He called a cab, but when it arrived dismissed it. Then she added:

"After the driver left he ordered me to leave him again. He told me to pack up at once."

She testified that McCready had frequently struck her, once cutting her lip, and the only time he was sober was on one occasion he was in the hospital for six days taking the drink cure.

A witness for Mrs. McCready, Dale F. Carrier, of Hollidaysburg, informed Judge W. Heber Dithrich who heard the case, that while he was at the McCready home visiting them, an argument arose and he saw McCready strike his wife.

SLOT MACHINES SEIZED

While children from the Lincoln school across the street, county detectives said, were spending their recess playing the slot machines, the sleuths today raided the Meyer's store, 6502 Franks-town avenue. Detectives Frank Malone and John Geisler declared complaints of neighbors and parents inspired the raid.

Three slot machines—25, 5 and 1-cent machines—were taken, and Nat Meyer, 21, alleged proprietor, was arrested, charged with maintaining a gambling device.

STORE HELD UP IN KNOXVILLE

Two youthful bandits, pale-faced although armed, walked into the P. H. Butler store at Knox and Moore avenues, Knoxville, shortly before noon today. One pushed a revolver into the side of Miss Emma McFeely, manager, who had been alone in the store. The other scooped up the money in the cash register. They escaped in an automobile. No estimate of the amount taken was made.

Wife's Will Leaves Husband $35,000

The will of Ida M. Lyons, 6525 Shetland avenue, probated today, leaves an estate estimated at $35,000 to her husband, Samuel S. Lyons, and names him executor.

Boy Steps on Nail, Dies 10 Days Later

Michael Togan, 16, of 213 North Diamond street, McKeesport, stepped on a nail 10 days ago. He died in McKeesport Hospital last night of tentanus, according to a morgue report.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 5.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Mr. Roosevelt's reforestation program will pay for itself if they do nothing but teach young men what to do in a forest fire. Our catastrophe out here will be a lesson to politicians as to who to put in charge of men.

MOTHER HURT, SON FINED

Accused of throwing an oil lamp at his 67-year-old mother, knocking her unconscious in her home last night, Frank Rychanek, 27, of 1707 Larkins way, was fined $20 with the alternative of 20 days in jail by Magistrate T. D. Jones in South Side Police Court today.

Police testified that the mother, Mrs. Mary Rychanek, was in South Side hospital and could not attend the hearing.

The son denied the charge saying his mother had slipped on the floor and struck her head against the lamp.

Mifflin Unpoliced, Ex-Chief's Car Taken

While Mifflin Township commissioners met in a special session in the municipal hall last night to consider, among other things, the township's police protection, some one stole the automobile of Jesse J. Crawford, former police chief, which was parked in front of the municipal building.

With the exception of two desk sergeants, the township has been without police protection since the discharge of its police force as an economy move last July.

Carnegie Man Dies Of Throat Wounds

His throat slashed Frank Poliski, 55, of 217 Zero street, Carnegie, died in South Side Hospital today. The wounds, according to a morgue report, were self inflicted.

INSURANCE LAW BENEFITS TOLD

Importance of the state law, effective January 1, which will force certain automobile operators to carry liability policies, was outlined before the opening session today of the Pennsylvania Association of Insurance Agents.

The act meets the problem of keeping unsafe drivers off the road, H. R. Teitrick, chief of Division of Agents and Brokers, Pennsylvania Insurance Department, told the insurance agents meeting in Hotel William Penn. A method is provided to insure adequate compensation for destruction and injury, most times caused by an operator rather than the owner, he said.

While the act does not effect all operators, it controls those who have been involved in accidents where damages, exclusive to the operator's car, exceed $200.

Former Gov. John S. Fisher will be the principal speaker at tonight's banquet.

URGE PROPERTY VALUE CUT

Charging that the city's Board of Assessors has failed to revalue Pittsburgh real estate although the board members know property has depreciated, Harry Shapera, member of the executive committee of the Allegheny Real Estate Owners and Taxpayers League last night urged a cut in valuation from $1,200,000,000 to $900,000,000.

Thousands of property owners, who have until Saturday to appeal, are doing so, Shapera said. He added that cutting the valuation of Pittsburgh real estate would also curb the borrowing power of the city and the Board of Education, and thus prevent further burdening of the real estate owner.

Shapera spoke at a meeting of the directors of the league last night.

FRENCH GROUP VISITS HERE

A group of French officials, touring the United States under auspices of the Institute of American Studies, was to arrive in Pittsburgh today to be guests of Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology. The Institute of American Studies was organized to promote amity between the United States and France.

In the party are M. Francois-Latour, director of the budget of the city of Paris; E. Delesalle, A. Breuvart and M. Liorel, industrialists; M. Thiers, oil refiner; M. de Puent, attache of the Argentine embassy in Paris; Mme. Liorel and Mme. Maunoury.

The visitors will be guests of Dr. Baker at a dinner in the University Club tonight.

Tourists Aboard Wyoming May Make History

By ARTHUR (Bugs) BAER

Well, the marines are off on another practice cruise. They took a battleship along in case of a tie.

Secretary Hull says no members of the Montezuma Glee Club will be landed in Cuba, Florida or Panama. We know all about that. If trouble starts it will be a pleasure trip.

In mass formation the marines have always been first to fight. Even individually, it is tough to get one of them to accept an apology.

We didn't see the Wyoming's passenger list. But it is liable to be the most prominent group of tourists who have sailed this year.

West Newton Grid Team Signals Go to Rivals

It was a nifty secret practice the West Newton football squad was holding on a field alongside the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks yesterday in preparation for their annual game with Elizabeth High School, their deadly rivals.

That is, it was thought the practice was secret—until a bright-eyed lad spied two suspicious figures lurking behind a nearby boxcar.

The indignant West Newton players pounced upon the pair and frisked them. In their pockets were the closely-guarded secrets of the coming game, all of West Newton's signals, as they had been called in the practice game.

Constable Frank Brenneman was called to put the two onlookers under arrest. He inquired as to the charge. The players were stumped. Finally, they decided to lodge a charge of trespassing on railroad property. They were en route to a squire's office when Prof. Robert Kill and one of his associates from Elizabeth High School arrived and asked to have the boys released.

The pair were finally released, but the West Newton players say they will carry a complaint to the W. P. I. A. L. and demand some sort of ruling to protect a football team when it holds a secret practice.

Pittsburghers Play Film 'Background' Roles

Background scenes for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Transcontinental Bus," a film starring Robert Montgomery, were being photographed in Pittsburgh today with about 30 Pittsburgh folk in extra roles.

Headed by John Waters, a camera crew came to the city Tuesday, recruited extras from a downtown employment agency and began work yesterday at a Liberty avenue bus terminal.

A crowd of the curious gathered around the terminal as Waters and his squad directed the extras in the mysteries of acting. Following the shots at the terminal, the "company" motored to Mt. Washington and Turtle Creek, where views of the city and the Westinghouse Memorial Bridge were recorded.

Waters said he plans to follow the bus route to the West coast, taking background scenes at principal bus terminals en route.

The featured players of the picture were not in the city. They will be photographed in the usual way on a Hollywood movie lot, and where necessary such background shots as are taken in Pittsburgh will be superimposed on the finished film.

NADINE 'NECK' PLANS NEAR APPROVAL

The Public Service Commission, at a meeting in Harrisburg today, was expected to approve the agreement between Allegheny County, the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Pennsylvania Water Company which will enable work to be started before the end of the week on elimination of the Nadine "bottle neck" and completion of the Allegheny River boulevard.

The agreement was placed before the Commission at a hearing here yesterday. The Commission has indicated that the matter will be one of the first matters taken up today.

The John F. Casey Company, holder of the original contract for construction of the boulevard, is ready to proceed with the work the moment the approval is given. By hurrying the work, it may be possible to have a great part of the concrete poured before winter sets in, engineers said.

Under the agreement the railroad tracks will be moved nearer the river and the present roadbed will be used as part of the roadway.

The approval of the Commission is more or less of a formality, as all parties concerned have reached an agreement after more than two years of litigation. In going through the property of the water company, made possible by condemnation proceedings, the county will have to pay $100,000 to the concern and also build a conveyor system at a cost of between $25,000 and $30,000.

When work at the bottle neck was first halted, the water company demanded more than $200,000 damage and approximately $50,000 to build the conveyor system. The water company also insisted the county set up a capital fund to maintain the conveyor system.

BOY EVANGELIST HEARD HERE

Modesty has no place in religion, Junior Lehman, 19-year-old evangelist declared last night in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street. His subject was "I Am Not Ashamed of the Gospel of Christ."

Tonight he will speak on "The Voice of God."

No one should apologize for being a follower of Christ, Junior said, and added:

"It is the greatest honor in the world to be a Christian. Most of the greatest men in history since Christ came upon the earth have been Christians and mighty proud of it too."

K[illegible] Y AND WIFE DENY GUILT

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—George (Machine Gun) Kelly and his wife, Katheryn, pleaded not guilty today to federal kidnaping charges based on the abduction and ransom of Charles F. Urschell, oil millionaire.

Under heavy guard the Kellys were moved by automobile from the county jail to the federal building for the arraignment. They were returned to the well-fortified jail immediately afterward.

Judge Edgar S. Vaught refused pleas of their attorneys for a 24-hour delay in the arraignment and denied Mrs. Kelly a change of venue.

Kelly was represented by James H. Mathers, attorney who defended Harvey Bailey in the kidnaping case, and Mrs. Kelly's attorney was John Roberts, whom she contacted while she was still a fugitive to defend her mother, Mrs. R. G. Shannon.

MARITAL BLISS RULE SOUGHT

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Science is on the trail of happiness in marriage and may soon have some valuable information for those about to try matrimony.

Meanwhile, a few preliminary conclusions based on 526 answers to questionnaires sent to married couples were announced by the scientific research committee of the University of Chicago, of which E. W. Burgess, professor of sociology, is the chairman. Six thousand more are out and remain to be heard from, but observations already made include:

The belief that the longer the courtship lasts (within the period of one year) the better are the chances for permanent married happiness. For every three months less than a year the chances diminish by 30 per cent.

If the persons about to be married take the advice of their fathers on the fitness of their prospectives mates they will be happier than if they pay no attention to what the fathers have to say.

If they take the advice of their mothers things won't work out so well.

MAUG ESCAPE JURY DISAGREES

A jury today, after an all-night deliberation, failed to reach a verdict in the case of Walter Swisher and Clyde Kerns, charged with aiding John Maug and Edward Turpac, Western penitentiary convicts, to hide out after their escape last spring.

The foremen told Visiting Judge John H. McMann the vote stood eight to four. He did not disclose what verdict the majority favored.

The court declared:

"Your action is a travesty on justice. You should have reached a verdict in 20 minutes."

MOTHER SEES CHILD KILLED BY TROLLEY

In view of her mother and little companions two-year-old Gladys Yates, was killed beneath the wheels of a street car in front of her home, 2543 Fifth avenue, late yesterday.

The child, holding her doll, darted from the sidewalk into the path of the car to retrieve an empty match box one of her companions had tossed into the street, police said. From the small porch of their home, Mrs. Agnes Yates, the mother, saw the city-bound car approach from the curve.

Screaming, Mrs. Yates ran toward her daughter, but the child was under the car before she could reach her. Jacks were used in extricating the victim. She was taken to Montefiore Hospital and pronounced dead of internal injuries and a broken neck. Mrs. Yates fainted as her daughter was rushed to the hospital.

Gladys' father, Walter Yates, an ironworker, has been out of work four months and is without funds, neighbors said.

"Clothes for four generations in our family are kept new-looking with Chipso" says Mrs. W. G. Poole

"My mother taught me—and she taught her mother—to use Chipso," young Mrs. Poole, of Washington, D. C., told us, while we looked at snapshots of her two darling children.

So we took a picture, including grandmother! (Great-grandmother was away visiting.)

"Chipso makes the washing so easy to do that even in the winter when we live in a kitchenette apartment, we do almost all of our washing at home," Mrs. Poole continued. "And by that I don't mean just the children's clothes and our underwear, but the towels and the table linens as well. If you soak these heavier things a little while in Chipso, you don't have hard rubbing to do. They rinse out perfectly snowy.

Safe for colors

"Yet I know that their whiteness isn't due to any harsh bleach, because they wear so well, and because Chipso never harms colors. Mother and I even wash our silk underthings and silk stockings, as well as Buddy's jersey suits and Nancy's soft sweaters, in Chipso.

"We use Chipso for dishes, too, and for all kinds of scrubbing. It saves the appearance of your hands, yet makes grease and dirt disappear like magic."

Chipso is not adulterated with the harsh substances contained in inferior soaps which gradually weaken fabrics and dull their color. Chipso loosens dirt harmlessly by RICHER SUDS. That is why Chipso-washed clothes stay new-looking for years.

Don't endanger the clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get Chipso from your grocer. At its low price, Chipso is the biggest value in rich, safe soap on the market today!

TOLL FOR TUBES PROTESTED BY SOUTH HILLS

Declaring that the levying of a toll on the Liberty Tubes would retard advancement of the South Hills, civic leaders last night drew up resolutions protesting the proposed levy of a five-cent fare on traffic through the tubes.

The resolutions will be presented for action at a meeting of the Brookline Board of Trade in the Brookline School Monday night, and at the meeting of the Mt. Lebanon Civic League in the Mt. Lebanon Municipal Building next Wednesday night.

Although no formal action was taken, the board of directors of the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh, meeting last night in the club's headquarters, 5095 Baum boulevard, objected to the proposed toll on the grounds that it would aggravate congestion at the tubes.

RETARD ADVANCEMENT

The toll has been suggested in connection with the contemplated improvement project for which the county may seek a $10,000,000 federal loan.

George P. Kountz, president of the Mt. Lebanon Civic League, expressed the opinion that the toll would retard advancement of the South Hills.

W. J. Blakeley, a director of the Brookline Board of Trade, said that he believed the levying of the toll would be unjust to the South Hills.

Explaining that a study of the proposed toll had not been carried far enough for the Associated Municipalities of Southwestern Allegheny County to take a stand on the question, L. C. Clark, association chairman, said that the matter would be discussed at the next meeting of the organization.

MAJOR IMPROVEMENTS

He expressed his personal opinion:

"The endeavor to have these great new major improvements has been participated in by the Associated Municipalities of Allegheny County. It is a definite fact that they'll not be financed by the United States government on the 30 per cent-70 per cent basis unless they are to some extent self-liquidating.

"As to the tolls on the Liberty Tunnels, that would cause much inconvenience and I believe will be established by the County Commissioners only if found necessary under the whole scheme of improvements."

The proposed tolls will also be considered at the next meeting of the Mt. Lebanon Community Association, according to Walter H. Babbitt, president, who also expressed opposition to the proposal.

Civic leaders in numerous other South Hills communities said that the toll would be considered unfavorably by residents of their sections.

POLICE ACCUSED AT VOTE PROBE

Fourth District of the Twenty-first Ward to quit using voting machines and use the ballots, by Miss Cecelia M. Hilte, of 1227 Liverpool street. Miss Hilte, an overseer, declared she refused to permit the board to push aside the voting machine. She further declared that Martin, the district Republican chairman, threatened to take the entire board to court unless they quit using the machines. A deputy sheriff also ordered the board to quit using the machines, Miss Hilte declared.

Fred Grote, of 2942 East street, an Independent watcher in the Twelfth District of the Twenty-sixth Ward, testified police and firemen tried to dictate to the election board and force use of paper ballots while the machines functioned. He said that William Robertson and Charles Greb, ward and district chairmen respectively of the Republican organization, were so insistent in their demands that he finally asked that they be ordered from the polling place. Grote also said that when the ballots were delivered, the Democratic ballots disappeared and only Republican voters used paper ballots, while the Democrats used the machines. The ballots were later found under some rubbish.

Mrs. Emma J. Patterson, of 5809 Rippey street, who said she was more than 70 years of age, told of not being able to vote in the Second District of the Eleventh Ward. She said some of the buttons would not turn and when she complained to the election officials, one man told her to vote some that would turn.

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Love Is Not Gained Because Of Beautiful Clothing

She says she wants loving—and how!

But does she?

Or is she just putting on an act and wondering why it doesn't go over?

Maybe we know what ails her. Maybe we don't. Be that as it may, our answer goes for thousands of silly, selfish little smarties, who want to get the best there is without any giving, and end by just getting—left.

Dear Elsie Robinson:

I'm sure hundreds of letters pour into your office, all voicing the same plaintive query—"What shall I do to become popular?"

And I, too, am whimpering the same eternal lament. Bluntly, I am love-starved and I beg you to help me.

I am 20 years old, but look much younger, I hope! I am no slouch at a party, I know. Yet I am not popular. I have read all the ads. I "asked my best friend" and she says "positively no." I keep myself absolutely clean.

I joined a dancing class and by the time I was through people were all doing the Lindy Hop, which I had never learned. I joined a correspondence class and studied French and I never order chicken salad twice.

My friends were astounded one night when I sat down at the piano and played as well as Goopy Geer. Ever since, that's all I do—while they dance. I rid myself of a stammer and learned to cook—but it hasn't turned the trick.

I went to a numerologist and he told me that if I wanted to change my name legally I should take up numerology. But do you think that has helped? You're right. It hasn't. All the boys want to make love, it is true—but not to me. They call me up all the time—to tell me to fix the radio, because the gang is coming over.

A "GOOD EGG"

I bought new sheet music so I could sing all the songs. My clothes are le dernier cri. My hair is cut in the latest fashion. I have my powder specially blended, and use a terribly seductive perfume. But all I am is a "good egg."

I want some lovin'. Am I too anxious? I try to be a good conversationalist and read a great deal—good stuff, such as Kathleen Norris and Ethel M. Dell (my favorite author). I am short and fat, but, since Garbo is my ideal, I've plucked my brows to get that enigmatic look, and I wear brogues, the size of which is much too large, with one of those hats pulled way down over my forehead. I even stayed out in the cold one night to cultivate a slightly hoarse voice. But all to no avail.

Please, what shall I do to become popular? I am frantically yours, SARA.

Why aren't you popular?

My hunch, youngster, is that you are—and that you wrote the foregoing smarty-come-on with most of your adoring gang hanging over your shoulder and snickering to think what a swift one you were putting over on me. Well, maybe you put it over—and again, maybe you didn't! So don't pin any medals on yourself just yet, baby!

However, now that we've had our laugh together I'm going to answer your letter as if you really meant it. For many a lonely girl has hid her hurt behind just such a wise-cracking front—and I'd rather waste advice on a hundred smarties than pass up one honest cry for help. So let's assume that you aren't popular and are wondering why.

WANTS SPOTLIGHT

I'll tell you why, Sara. Whether or not you meant that letter, the evidence is all there. Life isn't giving you anything, because never, in all your 20 years, have you given any friendly, grown-up service to life. You say you want love. But you're not willing to qualify for love. As a matter of fact, you're not even hungry for love. All you want is—the spotlight.

You're making a frantic effort, but it's not to win people. You're putting on your private three-ring circus to impress people—and make them think you're the world's dizziest doll.

You claim to have read Kathleen Norris. But did you ever find a Kathleen Norris heroine who went in for "le dernier cri" clothes, "seductive perfume" or oversize brogues, in an effort to ape Garbo? I'll say you didn't! Kathleen Norris heroines are as simple and honest as her own fine self—as friendly and generously unselfish as she is in her own life.

So cut out the hooey, Sara. Get down to earth. If you're fat, learn to exercise and eat right. If you want to really say things folks'll be interested in hearing read fewer sentimental novels and learn what's going on in the world and think about it. Concentrate on being Sara—not a dressed up clothes horse, but an honest-to-goodness regular woman.

You can't gain love by polishing your outside. You can only gain it by being something real inside.

Avis Balks at Madge's Proposed Alibi

"Oh, Mrs. Graham, of course I am willing to do anything you suggest, but surely it isn't necessary to take up your time and mine in going over a story which I am sure will never need to be used," replied Avis.

The smooth insolence of the girl roused me to a harshness I was loath to use. But I saw that I had no other alternative.

"Avis," I said, using what Dicky calls my cold and deadly tones, "do you wish me to call Mr. Veritzen now and tell him about that letter?"

The astonished gasp she gave was plainly audible to me over the telephone.

"You promised—" she said at last, reproachfully.

"I promised, if you fulfilled certain conditions," I told her. "I am at a loss to know why you are balking at doing this simple thing I am asking of you, when you know that I have planned it solely for your own protection."

"Oh, I know," she said, "and I am grateful. But—it is deception, you know, an alibi—and I don't like to be deceitful, especially to Uncle Phil. I am not so sure I won't need to say anything. I am sure he didn't mean to spy upon me, and that the man I saw will say nothing whatever to arouse his suspicions of me. Won't you please not bother about that alibi?"

AVIS RELUCTANT

"I am too busy a woman to waste any more time talking to you," I told her, seeing the futility of further argument with the girl. "I will give you 10 seconds to decide what you are going to do. At the end of that time, if you have not agreed to listen to me and act upon what I shall tell you, it will be too late for anything. I shall talk to Mr. Veritzen as soon as I can get his number."

This time there was no silence, no wait. Miss Avis Arlen evidently knew at just what point it was useless to contend longer.

"Oh, Mrs. Graham, how you jump to conclusions" she gurgled, as if she were the older woman and I the young girl. "I shall be only too glad to listen to whatever you wish to say, even though I am sure the story never will be needed."

How I wished that science had progressed farther with telephones—far enough to make it possible for me to reach out and shake Avis Arlen out of her smug self-satisfaction. But as it was, I had to content myself with saying cuttingly:

"Never mind your own thoughts and reactions. They are not at all important. The only thing you have to do now is to listen carefully to the little story I have prepared for you; then I shall wish you to repeat it back to me. Listen carefully, now!"

Without waiting for her assent, I jumped directly into the story Hugh Grantland had prepared, and when I had finished I spoke crisply:

"Now repeat it back to me:—"

MADGE ANGRY

I was prepared for demur, for objections to the role the story gave her, to anything save what happened. With a satisfied little laugh, she exploded into gratified exclamation.

"What a perfectly lovely story!" she said. "And the marvelous part of it that it really has a basis in fact. I do feel that I owe Mary an explanation, and I would give my soul if we could get together and become real friends before she and Noel are married. You know I told you there will always be something between Noel and me—"

"I shouldn't count on that Avis," I told her, putting as much brutality into my voice as I could manage. "Noel does not share your idea that there is something special between you and him. He is so much in love with Mary, in fact, that he can't think of anything in the world but her; and I should object very strongly to your trying to stage any reconciliation scene with Mary. I do not intend to have her upset by anything before the wedding.

"Now that we are speaking about it, please remember that I shall be watching you carefully the day of the ceremony. Now please repeat back to me what I told you. Or, wait—is there anyone in the room with you?"

"No."

"Then go ahead with the story."

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Correct Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At a dinner and bridge to be given by our company in a hotel, would it be correct for the girls to wear evening dress? The men, of course, will be wearing tuxedos. R.

Yes, but not dresses of the strictest formality. That is, the fact that the men are wearing tuxedos means that the occasion is not one of the strict formality, since, if it were, the men would wear tailcoats. The girls would wear dance frocks to this dinner and bridge.

Correct Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We would appreciate your settling the folowing dispute:

A says that when a bride-to-be is having a bridge in a tavern and the guests are not dressing semi-formal, the bride-to-be dresses accordingly. B says that the bride-to-be does dress semi-formal, regardless of how her guests dress, because she is the guest of honor. B.

It sounds as if the bride-to-be is the hostess, not the guest of honor. However, in any event, she wears an attire that is of exactly the same type as she expects her guests to wear.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Overcoming Adverse Distribution

When partners at the Bridge table reach a Grand Slam contract, an opponent holding six trumps to the nine-spot cannot be accused of undue optimism if he doubles a contract which appears to him to be certain of going on the reefs through the factor of adverse trump distribution alone. When the Declarer facing this situation finds a way to make that contract, he is to be congratulated not only upon his skill as a player but his ability to draw correct inferences as to the only possible way in which the contract can be made with a trump holding of four cards in one hand and three in the other. The hand below was played by Mr. Emil Koehler, a youthful Bridge enthusiast of New York City.

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 NT	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	7 ♠	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

North's bid of seven spades after his partner had bid six was based on the assumption that the King of spades should guarantee no losers in the trump suit and that inasmuch as South did not hold this card it should guarantee the safety of the Grand Slam. When North raised South's bid of one spade to two spades he guaranteed no more than four small cards of the suit, and if South could go to six spades without being sure where the King of the suit was, North felt he was justified in the ambitious contract. Certainly most players would double a Grand Slam with West's holding, provided there was an assurance that the opponents could find no safety in changing the contract to notrump.

West opened the heart 9, which South won with the King. Mr. Koehler could see that West's Double must be based on the possession of at least five and probably six of the outstanding trumps. In this case the contract was hopeless unless West held a particular distribution—namely, as many cards in the diamond and club suits as South held or not less than two clubs and three diamonds. Mr. Koehler proceeded to play the hand upon this assumption. He first cashed the Ace and King of clubs, and when West dropped the Queen the prospects of success appeared more promising. He continued with three rounds of diamonds, winning the last in his own hand. He then led the Ace of hearts and followed with a small heart. At this point West held nothing but trumps, but was perfectly helpless. Whichever trump he elected to play would be over-ruffed by Dummy. As a matter of fact, he played the deuce, which was won in Dummy with the six. The eight of spades was now played and won with the Ten in the closed hand. At this point West held four trumps, South three and North one. South now led his last heart, ruffed with the King in Dummy and spread his three high trumps for the remaining tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	Pass
Double	1 ♡

Answer: Yes—a Double automatically reopens the bidding and North may bid anything he chooses.

A & P Coffee comes to you really fresh. Its freshness is natural freshness—not just "preserved" freshness. Real freshness means freshly roasted coffee beans, ground to order before your eyes. Nature's own seal, the coffee bean itself, is the best guardian of coffee freshness. When this seal is broken for you by grinding you know you are getting all the rich, full coffee flavor.

These three coffees differ only in flavor. Choose the one that suits your taste. The quality of each is the same, the finest that money can buy. And remember, the coffee you like best is the best for you no matter what it costs.

'Almost Perfect Crime' On 12 Stations

Jack Roseleigh, famous for his role of Captain Flagg in "What Price Glory," gives the radio listeners in the tri-state area an equal thrill in this week's outstanding dramatic program, "The Almost Perfect Crime."

The drama, based on a story in next Sunday's American Weekly, big feature magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, reveals a cleverly—but not quite cleverly enough—plotted murder in which the plotter planned to commit the crime without leaving the slightest clue.

Thursday—WFBG, Altoona, 3 p. m.; WLW, Cincinnati, 7:45 p. m., and WKBN, Youngstown, 8:15 p. m.

Friday—WSAZ, Huntington, W. Va., 1:30 p. m.; WHBC, Canton, O., 2 p. m.; WALR, Zanesville, 5 p. m.; WJAC, Johnstown, 5:15 p. m.; WOBU, Charleston, W. Va., 5:15 p. m.; WADC, Akron, 7:45 p. m.; WAIU, Columbus, 8 p. m.; WLBW, Erie, 9 p. m., and WJAS, Pittsburgh, 8:45 p. m.

Francis X. Bushman Makes Comeback in Radio Act

By AIRCASTER

In the dim, but not so distant era of the silent pictures, there was, if you remember, a husky lad who became the idol of the cinema, accumulated a fabulous fortune, lived in veritable castles, and lost in love.

His star faded, as do the stars of idols, and he drifted arduously into obscurity and then into poverty. But through it all, he rode a hobby. It was the fancy and care of the only friends who didn't desert him—dogs!

When his millions were mounting, Francis X. Bushman bought the best of dogs, and built palatial kennels for them in Maryland and in Hollywood. When necessity demanded, he sold the more valuable of the animals, but his love for the pets persisted.

At the height of his career, he never dreamed that his hobby would, one day, rehabilitate him, and strangely enough project him back into the entertainment world, albeit, a new sort of world, which people called radio.

* * *

Stages Comeback

For Francis X. Bushman is coming back, and to the radio, and there is a career before him. It is hardly a secret that millions of listeners go for dogs in a big way.

The once-great screen lover is returning in a modest role which has to do with another, and perhaps more durable sort of love; the love that exists between master and dog.

"He's beginning his career via CBS on October 15, in the Rin-Tin-Tin series.

If you know the restless, jocular Ben Bernie, you must know that he kills, as a rule, 20 heaters a day—the heaters, to use his own vernacular, being cigars.

The stogies that Ben is smoking nowadays are probably made of sawdust, for the doctor has dictated that Ben smoke special made "heaters" innocent of the mild narcotic.

Seals Crazy Over Horses

During the Sun-Telegraph weekly sports broadcast, heard over WCAE at 7 p. m., Huntsman Lawrence discusses the annual meet of the Western Pennsylvania Hunts Racing Association, to be held at Huntlands, near Greensburg, Columbus Day.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

If Robert Ripley gets in touch with Mrs. H. C. McKeiver, of Dormont, she can tell him about N. R. Adams, of Erie, who 30 years ago had a blue eagle tattooed on his arm with his initials, N. R. A., placed above it.

* * *

Irene Dooley suggests that we change the name of last year's "depression plant" to "Nira" flower.

* * *

H. B. Johnstone is all steamed up about the signatories to the motor code. He has been misinformed. The big motors firm he mentions has signed.

* * *

Globe-trotter Max Thompson vouches for this one: A woman who wanted the neighbors to see the delivery trucks roll up to her front door made a habit of buying insignificant articles from an harassed out-of-town department store and having them sent out.

One day after she had purchased a spool of thread and asked for it sent home, the exasperated store officials called for their largest van, ordered a crew to man it, and with no other packages sent the spool out.

The van pulled up in front of the woman's house. With much noise and excitement the crew let down the back and attached a gangplank runway suitable for moving a concert grand piano.

When the neihbbors started pulling aside their curtains to stare in expectant awe at this, the newest and most magnificent of purchases, the crew with much ado rolled the spool of thread down the runway, over the sidewalk, heaved and strained up the porch steps and rang the bell.

Thousands ACCEPTED THE INVITATION of A&P

Two weeks ago A & P Food Stores invited local housewives to try this new Whole Milk Loaf. Now it is the largest selling loaf in the city

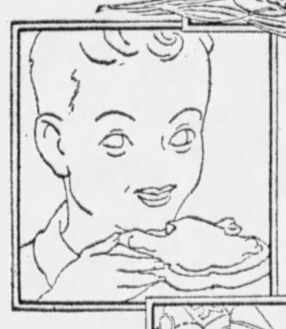
...ITS WHOLESOME

A&P Whole Milk Bread is exceptionally wholesome due to it being made with whole milk containing the full amount of butter fats as prescribed by the U. S. Government Bureau of Standards.



DELICIOUS

It has a flavor that is distinctly individual and totally unlike any other bread you have ever tasted. The whole milk content and its delicious taste makes it especially attractive to children.

ECONOMICAL

While various makes of other bread have advanced in price this big pound and a half loaf still remains at ten cents. It is baked by master bakers working under NRA regulations, and only the tremendous volume of A&P makes this low price possible.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Just a few days before the first debutante party of the fall, to be given Tuesday, a new debutante is added to that long list we all find so satisfying.

The newest bud is pretty Louise Zachary Collier, daughter of the John Z. Colliers. Mrs. Collier hasn't set a debut date for her daughter yet, but she'll give a bridge-tea for another debutante, Barbara Verner, October 18 in the Twentieth Century Club.

* * *

Tuesday will be a notable day in social annals—the biggest debutante season since depression came upon the social realm.

Two Buds To Bow

The grand opening of the debutante season will bring two debutante parties on the same day, for Patricia Witherow and Florence Willock.

Petite, black-haired Patricia Witherow will make her debut at a luncheon her mother, Mrs. David G. Witherow, will give at her home Tuesday. The guests will be limited to the debutantes of the season.

And in the afternoon charmingly tall, slender, dark-haired Florence Willock, daughter of the George J. Willocks, will make her bow to the social world at a tea her mother will give in the Twentieth Century Club.

Aides for Deb Tea

Aides at Florence Willock's tea will include Patricia Witherow, Annette Chester, Eloise Dorrance, Sally Jane Fields, Mary Gordon, Margery Hillman, Gretchen Lape, Barbara Peirce and Barbara Verner.

October 12 Mrs. Henry Mason Reed will entertain the debs at a luncheon in the Fox Chapel Golf Club in honor of Florence Willock.

Another luncheon for the debs will come on November 8 when Mrs. W. Eugene Gary will entertain in the Fox Chapel Golf Club, also honoring Florence Willock.

Sally Jane Fields will make her debut at a tea her mother, Mrs. Stanley H. Fields, will give in the Twentieth Century Club November 29.

Wednesday there'll be a debutante party in the East of much interest here, when Gertrude McGinley, daughter of T. A. McGinley, of Sewickley Heights, and Mrs. Holden McGinley, of Boston, Mass., will make her debut at a dinner-dance in Boston.

Debut in East

On Friday, the thirteenth, pretty Annette Chester, the Roderick M. Chesters' daughter, will make her curtsy to the grown-up social world at a luncheon her mother and Mrs. George B. Motheral will give in the Twentieth Century Club.

Another October debutante will be blonde Margaret Rowe, daughter of Mrs. Charles A. Rowe. Her grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin B. Howell, of the Alder Court Apartments, will present her at a tea in the Twentieth Century Club, October 17.

Charming young Vardi Marshall will make her debut in October, too—on the twenty-sixth, when her mother, Mrs. Lee Holmes Marshall, will give a tea in the Twentieth Century Club.

There'll oudoubtedly be more debutante news for October later on, and November and December will bring a host of parties for our young initiates.

P.C.W. Graduate Is Married to W.Va.U. Man

At 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson C. West, of Sixth avenue, New Kensington, their daughter, Miss Marguerite Hall West, became the bride of Fred Raymond Lardin, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Lardin, of New Kensington.

Officiating was the Rev. Dr. George S. Bowden, pastor of the Parnassus Presbyterian Church. Miss Beatrice Merriman, of Carrollton, O., played the wedding music. The ceremony took place before an embankment of ferns and yellow chrysanthemums, in the presence of the families.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore electric blue velvet. Empire mode, with a jacket fashioned with a high neckline, shirred shoulders and long, close-fitting sleeves terminating in a point at the wrists. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lardin, Jr., will be at home in Fourth avenue, New Kensington.

The bride is a graduate of the Winchester School and of Pennsylvania College for Women. The bridegroom is a graduate of Staunton Military Academy and of West Virginia University. He is also a member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Gossipy Chat

By NANCY JANE

Tar refuses absolutely to come in the back door of his home, that of the Harry L. Mitchells, Forbes street. He'll come in the front door, or not at all. No servants' entrance will ever see him!

Before school started, and before she decided to come out this winter, she laid in a supply of the no-nonsense sports clothes beloved by college girls. And since debs wear velvet afternoon dresses and the like to luncheons their coming out year, Katharine is in a quandary.

* * *

Katharine is another debutante whose favorite pet is a dog. She has a little Scottie, son of an old favorite. The new dog doesn't have a name yet—in the meantime he answers to Mac and even Angel. He's to be dubbed eventually either Jock II or MacDougal.

Leisure Opportunities Discussed in Edgewood

The opportunities of leisure were discussed by Miss Hannah Gillender, president of the Edgewood Woman's Club, at the tea given yesterday in her honor. Various members described their vacation trips and there was a delightful program of piano numbers by Mrs. Denning Stewart. A number of visitors from other clubs were present.

Ruth Enderlin Married to Minister

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Enderlin, of Greensburg, make known the marriage yesterday of their daughter, Miss Ruth F. Enderlin, to the Rev. J. Bender Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Miller, of Jeannette. The ceremony took place at 11 o'clock in Trinity Lutheran Church, Jeannette, with the Rev. Edward Rogers, pastor of the Franklin Lutheran Church, a former classmate of the bridegroom, officiating.

The bride wore sapphire blue chiffon velvet with grey accessories, and a turban of grey velvet. Her corsage was of Talisman roses. Miss Madeline Enderlin, who was her sister's maid of honor, wore brown chiffon velvet with matching hat and accessories and carried Johanna Hill roses. Robert Miller was best man. Ushers included the Rev. Richard Kline, of Meadville, Pa., and Everett Sorber.

The Rev. and Mrs. Miller left for a brief wedding trip in the north, and after October 15 will be at home in Saegertown, where the bridegroom is pastor of the Lutheran Church.

Rosslyn Club To Study 'Home'

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The Rosslyn Farms Woman's Club will devote this year to studying "The Home," and under that caption the program committee has outlined an interesting and distinctly worthwhile season. Mrs. S. D. Pearson, district conservation chairman in the State Federation, is addressing the club at its president's day meeting this afternoon.

The next event scheduled is a visit to the International Art Exhibit. After that Elmer Kenyon will discuss "Coming Pittsburgh Plays," and a visit will be made to the Better Homes Exhibit.

A children's pageant in the school auditorium and the usual community sing are the two Yuletide events. In the new year Dr. Florence M. Teagarden will give two lectures, the first on "Know Your Children" and the other on "Know Yourself."

"Books for All Ages," with Miss Elizabeth McKee giving the children's book talk; a Washington's Birthday musical tea, a talk by Charles Reizenstein on "Fine China and Glassware," a garden program, a drama night, a legislative forum, a spring luncheon with a musical program and, at the annual business meeting an address by the Very Rev. N. R. High-Moor, are the remaining program events.

The year comes to an end with a carnival in the park.

Opposes Co-ed System For Colleges

Co-education is excellent, but the least convenient period for it is from the ages of 18 to 22, according to Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Va., who was honored at a reception and dinner in Hotel Schenley last night by the American Association of University Women. She is to speak over KDKA today, as national president of the A. A. U. W.

A sister of United States Senator Carter Glass and of Mrs. Blair Banister, assistant treasurer of the United States, Dr. Glass has very definite ideas about college students, and especially university women in 1933.

Although post-war youth went in spirals, the younger generation is not lost, Dr. Glass believes.

"I don't think the younger generation is going to the dogs. I think they are even getting over their bad manners. They are more unselfish than they used to be, because they are more honest. Modern girls make excellent mothers. They do not feel that when their children are clean, fed and healthy, their duty is over. They are concerned with their play activities and are intelligent and resourceful in facing child problems."

Avoiding the use of the word "sex" in connection with coeducation, the noted woman educator favors segregation of the sexes during the college years because, she said:

Their whole education has been pointed up to that time. Their minds are alert and alive. It is not necessary to foster the ordinary interest men and women have in each other. They can develop more executive ability and character when they do not have to compete against men for top positions in campus organizations.

In her talk before the local A. A. U. W. members and their husbands at dinner in the Hotel Schenley last night, Dr. Glass spoke of college women as "enlightened amateurs." From their college training they should have acquired a number of things—the trained mind, the open-minded approach to a new subject, the logical process, the ability to put prejudice in its place and to see beyond themselves. They should have learned a good deal about co-operation from constant, intimate living with persons not of their own choosing and they should be able to go out into the world and put these things to a good use, she said.

Three piano numbers were brilliantly played by Miss Helena Thea Kramer, recently returned from studying in Leipsic.

ROMANTIC HATS BLOOM IN THE EVENING MODE

Very likely the much-vaunted Hollywood touch which has assailed Paris' accounts for the paillette bertha and cap sketched left below. The set is made of black and gold sequins attached in bands to a tulle cape and bandeau, and it is trimmed with soft black velvet bows. Right, a very lush accessory ensemble of white ostrich flues is sketched. The cape is tiered; the suede gloves are cuffed harks back to the Empress Eugenie with the feathers; and the little hat again, with its long feather.

By PRUNELLA WOOD.

THERE is not a daughter of Eve who does not nourish a secret conviction that one good blow out in her wardrobe would put her over as a first rate siren who could give cards and spades to any professional charmer. Well, the new evening hats are certainly dedicated to women of just this persuasion. "Naughty but nice" is an apt description of the lusher models, the ones that ought to hold the pavement spotlight at any first night.

* * *

SEQUINS they have, in true vampire generosity—but the stunt is to wear them with an ultra-simple evening gown rather than a leopard skin, to get them past the family censor. Feathers they use—whole coveys, if that is how ostriches herd, not to mention other fowl whose plumage has been dyed and stripped and otherwise disguised to ape the forbidden Paradise plumes.

* * *

FEW of these exotic little bonnets rush into the fashion solo. A capelet, a boa, gloves, bag, or whatnot are part of their plot, so that the picture is harmonious as well as devastating. Lots of the hats have halo veils of fine maline which may be worn provocatively over the brows and eyes, or turned up in a wide-eyed Juliette effect across the top of the head. Touches of metal and flocks of tiny velvet true-lovers' knots are tricky trimmings for this type of hat.

"—my skin became clear"

—wouldn't you like to be able to say this, too? Then pause a moment and reason . . . skin affections usually result because of lowered resistance from below the skin surface. Then help the blood that purifies the skin, by increasing its red-cells and restoring the vital oxygen-carrying hemoglobin in these cells so that more vitality comes to the tissues. This will increase the ability of the blood to devour infectious pimple germs.

That is just what S.S.S. does—proved by tens of thousands of unsolicited letters of thankfulness.

"Shall I use a good soap?"—certainly—"and cosmetics?"—naturally, but first observe Nature's law and lay the sound foundation from underneath the skin.

S.S.S., in addition to being a valuable general tonic, has the special property of increasing the red-cells and restoring the hemoglobin content of the blood, when deficient. Try a course of S.S.S. and note the constant improvement. © The S.S.S. Co.

Science says Today use a LIQUID Laxative

1. Control intestinal action exactly—no "purging"
2. Measure to suit your individual needs to the drop
3. Banish Bowel Fatigue and the laxative habit

Here's Why:

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and in some cases even affect the liver and kidneys.

A doctor will tell you that the unwise choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to take "a double dose" a day or two later.

In buying any laxative, always read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains one doubtful drug, don't take it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescriptional preparation in which there are no mineral drugs. Its ingredients are on the label. By using it, you avoid danger of bowel strain. You can keep the bowels regular, and comfortable; you can make constipated spells as rare as colds.

The liquid test:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels", but strong cathartics:

First. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose you find is suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without any need of stimulation.

Syrup pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used. It contains senna, a natural laxative which is perfectly safe for the youngest child. Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

A New Way to Glamour!

Geral
HAIR MAKE-UP

Geral, the new make-up for your hair, achieves the same remarkable results in the appearance of your hair that rouge, powder and lipstick effect in your face! It instantly heightens and enlivens the color of your hair . . . and brings out a million gleaming, glistening, dancing lights.

Simply comb Geral through your hair after shampoo—or as often as you wish. It washes right out with the next shampoo. (And note: It even makes your wave last longer, too). In four tints:

$1

Blonde—gives unmistakable youth to blonde hair. Not a bleach—but restores the color to hair that has become drab.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Presenting a Girl With Don Wahn's Verse

These poems for your shrine, and some are gay
(Like straining dogs released from ancient chains)
Exhibiting the heart of love in May,
Unmindful of cold Winter's binding pains.

These poems for your shrine, and some are sad
(Like rusty bells upon a jester's skull)
Exhibiting the heart of one, a lad
Whose love remained—but who to her grew dull.

These poems for your shrine, and some are wise
(I think—like Solomon or Socrates)
Exhibiting the heart of one whose eyes
Have madly feasted from some sage's trees.

These poems for—"But," interrupted she,
"My lovers bring me flowers and jewels, see?"

Quiteso, Quiteso

At the Vanity Fair Club the other premiere night a sassy show girl was being annoyed by a drunk.

"Oh, don't be so ritzy," he hiccuped, "I want to tell you a story without a point to it."

"Say, you'd better be careful," she warned, "somebody's liable to hear you, and give you a radio contract!"

Every Knock Is a Boo

And one critic rises to remark that he heard a joke so old yesterday that in two or three years it will be about right for Milton Berle and any other radio comic to repeat.

Titter

Bill Halligan and Irving Caesar were approached by Sid Marion, the comedian, who breathlessly said:

"You simply must see the new show at the Radio City Music Hall—it's marvelous, I tell you, it's great!"

Observation

Imagine

"Dear W. W.," writes George Le Guere, who was a somebody in the Broadway scene, "Hollywood certainly was aptly named when they christened it 'Heartbreak Town.' I'm now relegated to playing bits, but with a stiff upper lip. The other day, for instance, I did one line with a famous star—and in her first picture I was her leading man!"

Heheheh

Last week when they began moving the New York Stock Exchange a group paused to watch the long procession of vans riding out of the Wall street belt. As each truck passed someone commented on the contents.

"There go the desks and ticker tape," said one.

"Those are the safes," said another.

Add Similes

Bob Grannis:

There Is a Santa Claus

The story is true, but why bring her name into it now? She was widowed a few years ago when her husband was accidentally killed. He left quite a large estate, one-third of which she received immediately, but, according to his will, the balance of the fortune was to be given to her when she became 40—if, that is, she did not remarry. She still is in her early 20s.

A year ago she met a famous importer and fell in love with him. She didn't know that he, too, was worth a fortune. She decided to marry him and toss away the fortune she might have received later on.

Shortly after their wedding plans were made, the importer died—but he made this grand jesture, without her knowing it. He left her a trust fund for a million and a half to take the place of the coin she'd have lost if she had married him.

Uncommon Sense

An editorial writer was seeing a new play on a pass the other night, and he was irked considerably by tardy-comers, who stepped all over his feet getting to their pews.

At the first act intermission he growled to the manager:

"I'm going to write a piece and give the dickens to those people who came late."

"Please don't," he was asked, "they are infinitely preferable to those who don't come at all."

Snapper

Texas Guinan isn't easy to rattle when her specialty is being heckled. One of those unfunny interrupters got in her hair while she was performing, and she stifled him with this wallop:

"Lissen here!" she yelled, "I think your manners are rotten—and that's only a hint!"

Incidentally

Helen Gwynn relays the one that happened in a local theatre only recently. When an actor, after a long and tedious scene turned to another and said: "After that I think I'll buy a drink," a galleryite ejaculated:

"After that—I think you ought to buy one for the house!"

Male Attire Still for Dietrich

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 5.—Bets can now be paid off. Marlene Dietrich's first appearance at the Paramount studio was not in one of her 15 new patou creations, but in her familiar slacks, with a cap perched jauntily upon her yellow hair.

In the gayest of moods, the German star told me:

"Of course I'm not going to give up slacks and trousers. They are ideal for Hollywood."

Nevertheless, the actress admitted she will stick to feminine fashions for evening wear.

Little Maria, who used to have more bodyguards than any other child in the film colony, did not return with her mother to Hollywood. She is being put into school in Europe, pending Marlene's return there after the latter makes "Katherine the Great."

La Dietrich's first night home was an exciting one. With Josef Von Sternberg, she visited the Colony Club and later she joined other guests in a quick dash to the lobby of her hotel when the earthquake struck.

Funniest story of the week is about the Hollywood producer who went to the ritzy tennis tournament and ordered "tea and trumpets."

Then there's that other teatime incident at the same matches. The cinema 400 were sitting around balancing cups and being very English. At the stroke of five entered Bunny Austin, British racket ace. He waved to friends, sat down and ordered a fried egg sandwich and a cup of coffee.

Sally Eilers didn't want to do the picture with Jimmy Dunn, so now Fox has assigned her to be George O'Brien's leading woman in his next western. Which, incidentally, brings Sally right back to where she started from. The first picture she did in Hollywood was with George in "The Holy Terror."

Better late than never must be Bill Cagney's consolation for the belated blessing from his big brother, Jimmy. When reporters first asked Jimmy about Bill's marriage to Boots Mallory, the peppery Warner star denied it—said he'd talked to Bill the day before, and that if there had been any wedding, Bill would have told him. When absolute proof was offered, he shut up.

Now, after days have gone by, he says:

"Bill and I have the same viewpoint about things. I am in accordance with anything he does. Having met Miss Mallory some time ago, I know he has used good judgment. They seem to be very much in love and, after all, that is essential, isn't it. I wish them every happiness."

Mae West's pet monkey, "Boogey," was solemnly buried in the pet cemetery, but Mae was not there. She didn't feel up to facing photographers . . . What's this? Ida Lupino's escort at the Colony Club was Jack La Rue. It was her birthday party . . . You can't get Alice Terry to talk about Rex Ingram's conversion to the Mohammedan faith . . . Funniest things in weeks, they say, was Mervyn Leroy's state of attire when he dashed into the street after the earthquake . . . Chick Chandler had the most unfortunate experience, however. Not wishing to stay indoors, he began driving around in his car and ran into an ice wagon. Now he'll have to buy a new car.

Charlie Chaplin, Paulette Goddard, King Vidor and Elizabeth Hill were a foursome of revelers at the Beverly Wilshire. Charlie told a 15-minute story with pantomime that you could interpret clear across the dance floor . . . Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller, inveterate patrons of the late spots, were there, too. Also Ruth and Edgar Selwyn, who go to all the places these days.

And you can forget that rumor—at least for now—about a separation between Clara Bow and Rex Bell. Clara says its "ridiculous!"

Orson Welles, who will play leads in the repertory of Katherine Cornell, this season, including Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet" and Marchbanks in "Candida," apears to be a fellow who can't make up his mind. An amateur actor at home in Kenosha, Wis., he decided to become a painter. In Ireland he decided to act if he got the chance. He got the chance. In Dublin he also produced a play in which he acted, too. He came back to America a year ago and made up his mind to give up acting and be a writer. So he wrote a play, and it will be produced in Dublin this season. He also wrote a text book on the staging of "The Merchant of Venice," and illustrated it himself. And now he has decided again to be an actor. Versatile chap, this Welles!

Viola Rudell and her teammate, Edward Dunnigan, will be seen in a skit of fun and song, "Such Is Life," as part of the vaudeville opening Friday in the Pitt.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Package

JOE GREEN walked slowly in the direction of his home after a pretty dull day. Passing him, you would never give him a second glance. For Joe Green was so essentially the average man that a second glance was never necessary.

Everything about the man spelled the average. The way his clothes fitted him. That plodding look in his eyes. The very manner in which he walked. Average; that was Joe Green. And it was a thousand to one that he would go through life exactly as he was.

Not that Joe Green wasn't ambitious. Lord, no! His young, active mind teemed with ideas. Ideas of betterment for himself—and Lucy. To move out of the squalor they called castle. To dress Lucy as his eyes saw her. To give her reason to be really proud of him.

Oh, if he could only get away from keeping books; keeping the wealth of others in order. If he could only succeed in getting into the——

He smiled bitterly. Get in! Certainly Kipling knew whereof he spoke when he said:

Joe Green and Lucy lit their after-dinner cigarets and pushed back from the table. They inhaled deeply from their tiny, spark-tipped wands of magic. Subtle Lady Nicotine was their one escape from the fetid, sticky blanket of smells, smoke and sweat that hung over their dingy, three-room flat in an East Side tenement.

Soon Lucy arose to wash the dishes. She hummed as she worked. Joe regarded her with tender eyes. She looked really beautiful in the twilight, although a suspicion of tired lines around her mouth bespoke self-denial.

Her humming ended. A sigh escaped her lips. Joe Green knew that sigh despite her courageous will. He knew she was thinking of that dress again; that dress she had seen in Springer's newspaper advertisement. She wanted . . . He couldn't give . . . It hurt.

What was it she had called that dress? Something about an afternoon ensemble with bolero jacket. Or was it a bolero ensemble with—

"Let's walk up the avenue, sweet, and give the natives a treat."

Lucy's cheery voice broke Joe's reverie. She noticed the hurt in his eyes. She drew herself up in mock hauteur. "Very well, then, sir. I will go forth alone to appease the clamor of the peasants."

Hand in hand, they strolled up Fifth avenue. Both silent. Their wandering footsteps took them to the very show window at Springer's where the coveted sport ensemble hung from wax shoulders. Lucy laughed at the painful coincidence. But only Lucy laughed.

Slowly they strolled back to their East Side home. Five flights in weary resignation, and an exhausted arrival. A foreboding blanket of gloom seemed to have enveloped the pair. Lucy went at once to her room. Joe unfolded his morning paper.

But he couldn't read. He was thinking of Lucy. Poor Lucy. Pulling that bad tooth hadn't hurt half as much as this did. That was pain. Sharp. . . Swift . . Biting. . .Cutting. This was ache. Steady. . .Boring. . .Gnawing. . .Dull. . .Dull. . .Dull. Lucy must have that ensemble. Sweet Lucy. Must. . .Must. . .Must.

He dozed. . .

Joyous hubbub greeted Joe Green as he entered the office that Saturday morning. The reason was on the bulletin board. Cosgrove, Cosgrove, Cosgrove and Cohen had subscribed to the NRA code, and all salaries would immediately be tilted 10 per cent.

Joe fairly raced through his work that morning. His heart was singing a joyous song. During the lunch hour, he would rush uptown. He'd now be able to buy Lucy that—whatever it was she called it.

Joe had just turned to cross Seventh avenue at Thirty-fourth street when it happened. The truck careened around the curb and bore down upon him before he could turn his head. The screech of brakes. A clash of changing gears. And the truck was gone as swiftly as it had come.

Screams. Police whistles. Bewildered cop. How'd it happen? No one knew. Kind of truck? Large. No, small. No, open. No, closed. Bromide: No one had seen a thing.

The clang of an ambulance. Traffic congestion cleared. Traffic moved on . . .

* * *

Lucy walked from the still figure lying on the hospital cot. What was that horrible jest the doctor had made? Dead? Just died? Joe dead?

* * *

The heavy hanging odor of iodoform stifled her. She wanted to cry out. But all she could do was walk. Someone approached her. What? A package? Her—her husband's? Placed in the ambulance with him?

She took the square, flat box mechanically and walked to the ward door. There she collapsed . . .

* * *

The steel-coated subway express roared into the station. Stenographers, shipping clerks, office boys and brokers catapulted into the cars. The nine-to-fivers were on their morning way.

Margie nudged Sally.

"Gee. Looka here. Another poor feller got kilt yesterday. A hit-and-run truck. Ain't that awful?"

"Yeah. Ain't it?"

Silence. Margie turned a page. Sally nudged her.

"Say. Looka that ad. Can you 'magine?"

Margie read:

"LOST:—Package containing afternoon ensemble with bolero jacket. Thought to have fallen off Springer's delivery truck in vicinity of Thirty-fourth street and Seventh avenue. Liberal reward."

Margie spoke.

"Say, whoever found that was plenty lucky."

Sally sighed.

"Yeah. Too bad we ain't got that kind of luck. Got another slice of gum?"...

Cuban Battle On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Pictures of the new outbreaks in Cuba are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, with a graphic description by The Globe Trotter. Troops are shown firing on Communists. A Hearst Metrotone News cameraman was in the midst of this clash. His camera was destroyed, but he managed to save his precious film. There are views at the Hotel Nacional, scene of the most recent outbreak.

President Roosevelt is seen and heard addressing the delegates to the American Legion convention at the Stadium in Chicago where he made his nomination acceptance speech.

First pictures from Mexico show the devastation wrought by the hurricane that swept through the Gulf and practically destroyed the city of Tampico. Rescuers remove the dead and carry the wounded into improvised hospitals.

As a climax to William Randolph Hearst Day at the Century of Progress in Chicago, 200 swimmers are seen in the waters of the Lagoon in the William Randolph Hearst $10,000 15-mile marathon race. Marvin Nelson, from Iowa, who won the Toronto marathan recently, wins by two miles, capturing first prize of $5,000.

Nine 'Shipwrecks' Seek One Job

"Shipwreck" Kellys seem to multiply. Originally there was one, now there are at least nine. Charles R. Rogers, producing "The Sky's the Limit" for Paramount, sent out a call for the original "Shipwreck" to come to Hollywood to train 20 girls as flagpole sitters. "Shipwreck" Kellys replied from nine cities. The one who gets the job will have to show credentials, Mr. Rogers says.

WE'VE SAVED ENOUGH in Doctor Bills Alone, to Pay—Twice Over—the Slight Extra Cost of GAS HEAT

"Before we had Gas Heat in our home, Betty had one cold after another during the winter—and her father and I had our share, too. Last year, with gas heat, we seldom had colds. And I am sure that the constant, even temperature provided by automatically controlled gas heat had a great deal to do with it.

"Discounting all the other advantages of Gas Heat—cleanliness, comfort, convenience, freedom from the bother and fuss of furnace-tending, and many others—this one fact of greater healthfulness makes gas heat worth all that it costs, and more. It's the last thing I'd give up in my home."

At the low gas rates now in effect, more homes than ever before can enjoy this ideal fuel. And gas heat really costs less than most people think. Let your Gas Company or heating contractor make a survey of your home and give you an accurate estimate of the cost of heating your home with this modern, clean fuel. ONLY GIANTS LOST FIRST TWO AND WON

Looking over a backstretch of three decades, Joe Cronin today could find only one precedent to offer him any encouragement as he prepared to carry on the World Series fight after the loss of the first two games. In 29 previous modern post-season struggles, just one club that lost both the first and second contests was able to come back and win the series. That club was the one with which the Senators now are battling, the Giants, and the feat was accomplished 12 years ago against the Yankees.

Joe Cronin

Not only were the Giants defeated in the first two events of the 1921 series, but they didn't even score in either game. Carl Mays, submarine right-hander, pitching against Shufflin' Phil Douglas, beat them in the opener, 3 to 0, and held them to three hits. Waite Hoyt, now a Pirate, repeated the shut-out in the second game by the same score, letting the Giants down with only two hits while Art Nehf was limiting the Yankees to three safeties. In spite of that discouraging start, however, the Giants rallied to win five of the next games and take the series, which that year was a best-five-out-of-nine affair.

No other club ever got away with the contract that confronted the Senators today. All of the rest that dropped the first two games also lost the series. The Red Sox came back to beat Pittsburgh after losing three of the first four encounters in 1903, and so did the Pirates against Washington in 1925, but both the Red Sox and Bucs had won the second game after dropping the opener.

BATTLES ONE OF COUNTRY'S PRO GREATS

Football fans of this district who used to marvel at the brilliant playing of Gyp Battles for West Virginia Wesleyan often wondered how he would look behind a powerful line. They got a chance to see last night while Gyp and the Boston Redskins were beating the Pittsburgh pros, 21 to 6, and it was an eyeful.

Even aside from his dazzling touchdown run that was the big act of the night, Battles was a star performer at all times, and there is no question that he ranks as high among the country's professional halfbacks as he did among the collegians in his days at Buckhannon.

The game as a whole strengthened the big hit that the pro sport has made here. Though the Pirates suffered their second defeat in three games, it did not lessen the public favor that the team and the National League has won. The fans know it will take time to develop a winner and they are willing to wait.

REULBACH'S ONE-HITTER STILL IN DISPUTE

With fandom still looking for some world series pitching records to be approached in the present struggle, attention is drawn again to the best listed performance, that in which Ed Reulbach, of the Cubs, is credited with having held the White Sox to one hit, a single by Jiggs Donohue, in the second game of the 1906 classic. Veteran critics never have agreed on that one-hitter. Many scored an additional hit for the Sox, a two-bagger for Fielder Jones, on an ugly bounder between first and second bases on which the other judges charged Johnny Evers with an error.

Two-hit world series games were pitched by Ed Walsh against the Cubs and by Three-Finger Brown against the White Sox in 1906, and by Burleigh Grimes against the A's and by George Earnshaw against the Cardinals in 1931.

DEAN STRIKES OUT 393 IN TWO SEASONS

While Dizzy Dean, in his two years in the big show, has not succeeded in leading the National League pitchers in earned-run average, winning percentage or number of victories, there is no doubt about his right to be ranked as the strike-out king of both major loops. Last year, Dizzy fanned 191 men to lead the two leagues, and this year he topped the big show again with 202, a total of 393 whiffs in two consecutive seasons, which is throwing a lot of strikes.

Dizzy Dean

WATCH-CHARM GRIDDERS IN TEMPLE GAME

Two of the smallest college football players of the year will be on the opposing squads when Carnegie Tech faces Temple University at the Stadium on Saturday. They are Jack Roberts, Owl halfback, and Steve Terebus, Johnstown halfback for the Tartans. Roberts weighs but 145 pounds, and Terebus 148. Each is slightly more than 5 feet 6 inches tall. Despite their small stature, Terebus stands a good chance of starting the season as Carnegie's regular left halfback, and Roberts is a Temple reserve, likely to see service frequently.

Though Roberts won fame by running for a touchdown the first time he ever carried the ball in a college game, he is not a member of Warner's starting troupe. He is considered too small for a regular, as Temple is blessed with a dozen rugged backs. The little fellow is held in reserve for the pinches. Terebus, of course, has no previous college feats to his credit, but he has been standing the boys on their heads in Carnegie's practice scrimmages. If he makes the grade as a regular, Plaid supporters believe he will prove to be one of the most colorful and popular players any Pittsburgh college team ever had.

MAY TRADE FORMER LOCAL HOCKEY GOALIE

Roy Worters

The present delay is said to be due to the fact that rival magnates are trying to obtain Worters for a cash consideration, while the Americans demand in exchange a high class forward who will add a scoring punch. Maurie Roberts, a newcomer from the minors who sparkled in one game for New York last season, is expected to replace Worters in the American nets.

WAGNER LOOKS FOR SENATORS TO RALLY

By HONUS WAGNER

(Baseball's Greatest Star; Coach of the Pittsburgh Pirates with Whom He Starred For 18 Years.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Well, folks, the outlook for the Senators is rather gloomy, but now that the scene has shifted to Washington and into a bigger ball park, the American League champions may start to strut. When you play inside baseball you must consider the parks, and there is quite a difference between the Polo Grounds and the Griffith Stadium.

Honus Wagner

Mel Ott practically won the first game by a little homer that would be an easy putout at the home of the Senators. When I picked the Giants to win the series I figured they would have a big edge inasmuch as the first two games were to be staged in the short fence layout in New York. Now the short fence did not decide yesterday's contest in favor of the National Leaguers, but the Giants had a big edge in having Hal Schumacher on the slab.

SCHUMACHER TOUGH

Schumacher, as I stated in my early articles, is a tough pitcher on the Polo Grounds. The fine offensive of the Terrymen in the second game was more of a surprise to me than Schumacher's five-hit pitching. I rather expected this youngster to throw a low hit game, for, as I mentioned before, Hal has a sinker that bothers a lot of good batters, especially in New York.

If you look up the records, I think you will find that the Pirates were just about the best hitters in the National League, collectively. The Buccos had a fine team average and there were times when we teed off on Schumacher and Hubbell, but I noted that when our fine hitters tangled with Schumacher at the Polo Grounds they were off their stride. At times they seemed to be swinging at nothing and those were the times they were trying to connect with Hal's sinker.

There may be some criticism of Joe Cronin who refused to attempt a sacrifice when runners were on second and first with none out in the sixth inning. Well, I am going to string along with Joe, or any other fellow who has enough nerve to try to upset anybody.

CRONIN'S STRATEGY FAILS

The Giants were so sure that Joe would bunt that Blondy Ryan was standing on second base with the idea of running off a force play at third on a bunt. Cronon is smart and we knew that a hit here would confuse the whole New York club. He took three good cuts at Schumacher's pitching; two of them were fouls and so was the last one that Mancuso caught.

I think it is a second guess to say he should have bunted.

I want to pay my respects to Al Crowder's pitching up to the time of the O'Doul hit. Al almost had Lefty on a foul tip and in many ways he pitched a smart game until Lefty upset him with that pretty single.

Ubl Quits Gopher Squad for Year

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Myron Ubl won't play football for Minnesota this year but hopes to do so in 1934.

The halfback, near death last fall when pneumonia followed a sternum fracture suffered in practice, said yesterday he had dropped out for this season in the belief this would be "better for everybody."

GIANT HURLER IN TROUBLE AT START

SENATORS SCORE TWO

Fitzsimmons' first pitch to Myer was a ball. Buddy had a two and two count when he slapped a spunky single to left field. Goslin smacked the first pitch against the right field wall for a pretty double and with runners on third and second the park was in an uproar. The game was held up for a moment and Manager Terry had his bull pen crew in action. Blondy Ryan ran into short left and took Manush's fly to help Fitzsimmons.

Herman Bell warmed up for the Giants. Fitzsimmons made a thrilling stop of Cronin's grounder toward third, but he slipped and had to be content with throwing out Joe as Myer scored. Schulte pushed a Texas League double to right for the second run. The play on Schulte at second was so close that Blondy Ryan protested Umpire Moran's decision. The two runs scored in the inning gave the Senators their biggest round of the series.

In the second inning there was an apparent mixup on the battery signs of Whitehill and Sewell. George Davis singled cleanly to left with one out. Whitehill served a fast pitch to Jackson, the ball hopping out of Sewell's glove and rolling to the stands, Davis going to second. Whitehill was charged with a wild pitch. Jackson then walked. Manager Cronin came to the rescue of his star left-hander in the crisis. Joe sprang in front of Mancuso's hot drive near second. A double play resulted by way of Myer and Kuhel to end the inning. The Giant catcher smacked a three and one ball and almost succeeded in getting it through.

BELL GIVEN SIGNAL

Manager Terry reflected his anxiety when Fitzsimmons threw two straight balls to Bluege in the home half. He signaled to Herman Bell to warm up and Herman obeyed the order just as Bluege smacked a double down the third base line. Bluege's double led to one of the high spots of the series. Catcher Sewell went out on a grounder as Bluege advanced. Whitehill, then tried a daring squeeze play with Bluege dashing for the plate. Whitehill took a swing but fouled off the ball. Had he missed fire entirely, Bluege would have been out.

Fitzsimmons then tried to get Bluege on Whitehill's smash, but Ossie jumped back and both runners were safe. Myer pulled a double over first to score a run and the Senators seemed to be in the middle of a big inning with men on third and second with Goslin up. Goslin hit an ordinary fly to Moore. Whitehill set sail for the plate like a real base runner, but his desperate slide failed to get him over as Moore made a beautiful play for a double play. Whitehill showed little effects of his base running ordeal as the Giants tried to blast him in the third. Myer gave him a great lift by a marvelous one-hand catch of Ryan's liner of the outfield variety. Fitzsimmons slashed a hit through Cronin, but Whitehill steadied and, although Critz got a single, nobody got beyond second.

OTT IS FANNED

Schulte singled in the home half of the third for a clean hit with two out. Home Run Ott didn't look so good swinging at Whitehill in this big ball park away from his favorite short rightfield fence. Melvin was handicapped. He went down swinging on a third strike in the fourth.

GRID INJURY FATAL

DUKES NEAR PEAK FOR GAME WITH BUCKNELL

LAYDEN FEARS BISONS' STAR TACKLE

By JESS CARVER

Elmer Layden, who earns his bread and butter (he's been going for plenty of gravy during the past couple years, too) as head football coach up at Duquesne University, would like to bet someone a large sum of cash that said someone won't put the glimmer to a better tackle than this Dempsey person who will be in Bucknell's lineup here tomorrow night against Elmer's Dukes.

That is the old Joe Bach influence coming out. The Dukes' line mentor has been muttering about Dempsey in his sleep ever since he first saw the Bison star in action, and Layden has caught the same disease. He couldn't keep his mind on the pro game at Forbes Field last night for talking about Dempsey and Meyers and other Bucknell stars.

DUKES ARE SET

But there is a faint hunch forming in this great mind to the effect that the Dukes are going to have a nice bundle of fireworks to put off under Dempsey and the Bisons on the morrow. The Dukes have been all too quiet about this game. It is their first really tough one of the fall; they are in fine physical and mental trim and when the Dukes are in trim, that is exactly what they have formed the habit of doing to their adversaries.

The Dukes' starting lineup will resemble the one that went to bat against West Virginia last week very closely. The backfield will have Art (Can He Strut?) Strutt at right halfback, and either DeCoster or Cutrona will get the call at quarterback, with the former a good 10-to-7 bet to be in there for the kickoff. There'll be no foolin' around with the Bach line or the remainder of the usual Red and Blue backfield.

Reports from Lewisburg have it that Coach Carl Snavely has shifted his lineup somewhat, but these college press agents have to have something to do to keep step with the NRA.

The Bisons squad will arrive in town this evening at 7:30 o'clock and drill under the lights at Forbes Field.

SPISAK TO START

Recognized defensive ability has turned the tide for Spisak. Although he always has been known as a running halfback, the fact that he is one of the best defensive backs in the game has passed unnoticed. Carnegie's running offense won't be weakened much by Spisak's use, but he is not nearly the passer that Terebus is. When Harpster is ready to open up his entire offensive plans, Terebus will get into the game.

It is just about certain that only one sophomore will get a starting job, and he is Steve Trbovich, former Midland High School star. Trbovich weighs only 167, but he is a sure tackler, rugged for his weight and fast. He has edged Jerry O'Toole out of the regular lineup at center, which is quite a feat considering the Lorain Irishman's fighting qualities.

PITT GETS SCRIMMAGE

There'll be a final scrimmage today at the Pitt practice field as Coach Sutherland polishes off his Panthers for the game with West Virginia. Muggsy Skladany, Izzy Weinstock and Mike Sebastian will be excused due to minor hurts.

Nick Kliskey is looking better and better day by day at the center job. Unless he suddenly develops a wild passing streak, he'll hold the job, for his defensive work is great. When he cracks 'em coming through the line, it's soft music and few flowers.

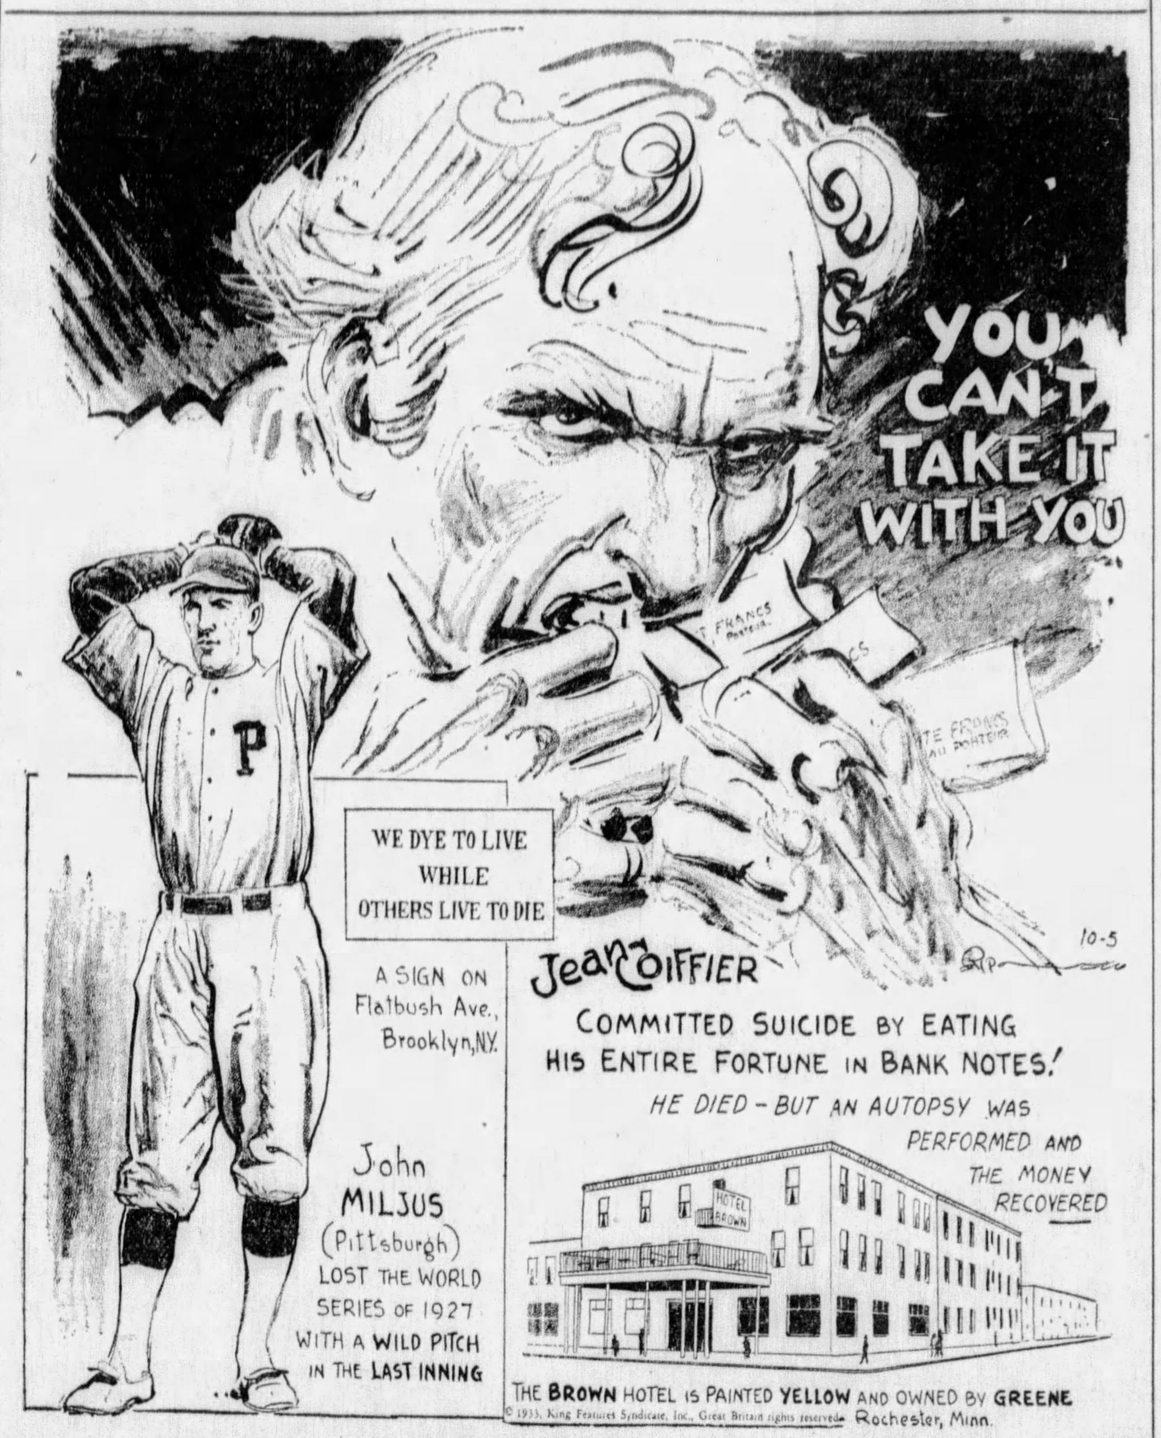
Believe It Or Not (Reg. by U. S. Patent Office) By Ripley

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)



EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY. A NOTABLE BARN—On top of the Gardner Hill on the farm belonging to the Fuller family, located about four miles north of Denton's Hill in Pennsylvania, stands a barn that is so nearly in the center of the watershed between the Genesee and the Allegheny rivers that the rain falling on the north side drains into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, while the rain that falls on the south side drains into the Gulf of Mexico, through the Allegheny, the Ohio and the Mississippi. The rain that falls to the east drains into Chesapeake Bay via the west branch of the Susquehanna River. There are three springs on the farm with such widely divergent mouths that, while the waters of the south side travel about 2,000 miles to the ocean, the distance covered by the north waters is about 1,000 miles.

TOMORROW: THE DESTROYER OF THE WORLD

VEECK, LEADER OF CUBS SINCE 1919, DIES

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—William Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, died at 7:45 a. m. (central standard time) today at St. Luke's Hospital, where he had been suffering from leucemia, an excess of white corpuscles in the blood.

The death of the veteran baseball official occurred shortly after his physician, Dr. Leo C. Clowes, said his condition had taken a definite turn for the worse. Last night he was reported somewhat better after oxygen had been administered to assist him in breathing.

Veeck entered the hospital several weeks ago and his condition was considered critical from the start. The oxygen was administered yesterday when his difficulty in breathing caused his heart to be taxed and his temperature to rise.

PLAYERS OFFER BLOOD

Headed by Manager Charly Grimm, the Cubs offered their blood for a transfusion, but Dr. Leo C. Clowes, physician in charge, declined, saying that two internes at the hospital had been tested and stood ready for any emergency. Late yesterday, Veeck seemed to have benefitted by the administration of oxygen.

Veeck was another small town boy who made good in the big city. The son of a wagon builder and cabinet maker, he was born in Booneville, Ind., in 1881. He assisted his father for a time, grew tired of the business and started out as a printer's devil on the Booneville Standard. After trying his luck at selling photographs on the road, he loafed around the offices of the Louisville Courier-Journal so long, begging for a job, that the city editor finally gave him a chance.

He made good there, married Grace DeForest, a boyhood sweetheart, and eventually came to Chicago. He finally landed a position of his liking as a baseball writer on the American.

PRESIDENT SINCE 1919

On December 8, 1918, when the White Sox were the baseball idols of Chicago, William Wrigley, Jr., who had just purchased a controlling interest in the Cubs, offered Baseball Writer Veeck the position of vice president. He accepted and was second in command to Fred Mitchell, who was named president in addition to active managership on the playing field. On July 6, 1919, Mitchell surrendered the presidency to the enterprising baseball writer-executive and confined his attention to managing the team.

Veeck's career as president of the club was featured by his willingness and eagerness to try new ideas.

Although shocked and saddened, officials at the Cub offices said today's second game of the city series with the White Sox would be played. The game set for the day of the funeral, probably Saturday, will be postponed, however.

Grimm, who was elevated from player to manager of the team in August, 1932, in place of Rogers Hornsby, was heart-broken when he heard the news of his baseball chief's death. He said:

"He was the fairest, squarest fellow that ever lived."

PITTSBURGH MEN DISCOVER NEW "PAINLESS SHAVING"

First Used by Local Barbers, "Noxzema Shave" Now Wins Wide Approval

MEN all over town—thousands of them—are saying "Goodbye" to sore, inflamed necks and all shaving discomfort. They have found a real painless way to shave—a cool, soothing comfortable "Noxzema Shave."

Local barbers first discovered what a wonderful shave could be had with Noxzema. The news has spread from shaver to shaver. Already thousands of men in this city are enjoying painless "Noxzema Shaves."

Noxzema has been famous for years as a cool, soothing medicated cream for sunburn, chafing, pimples and other skin troubles. Now it is found to be just as effective in softening beards, in getting rid of all the pain and irritation of shaving.

Just as Noxzema's penetrating oils soften red chapped skin, so it softens your beard—at the base. Just as Noxzema's desensitizing ingredients stop itching and soothe painful sunburn, so it lulls your skin so that it doesn't feel the razor.

Just try Noxzema for Shaving for a few days. If you have some in the house, just spread a little on your face before you lather and see what a big difference it makes. Or if you shave the modern no-brush-no-lather way, shave with Noxzema alone—simply wet your face, apply a little more Noxzema than you would as a lather-base, and shave. It's really astonishing how quick and easy shaving is when Noxzema is used—and your face feels so different afterward. No burning; no smarting—it feels so cool and comfortable.

CITY LEAGUE
Section I

Allegheny at Langley.
Local Games
Rankin at Westinghouse.
Bellevue at Oliver.
Carrick at Dormont.

By JULIUS LEVIN

Four members of the City High School League played their weekly football game this afternoon instead of tomorrow, as originally scheduled, due to the annual meeting of the Teachers' Institute, which requires the presence of all local teachers.

Only one of the four contests is a league affair. Allegheny, coached by Harry M. Springer, opposing Coach Bodie's Langley High eleven at Langley Field.

Three other members of the local circuit engaged in non-league affairs. Westinghouse entertained Rankin at Westinghouse, Oliver was host to Paul Zundel's Bellevue machine, while Carrick invaded Dormont to clash with Sam Smith's eleven.

The Perry-Shady Side Academy game will be played tomorrow as originally scheduled. The kickoff will be at 3:45.

Crafton High School, fresh from its conquest of Wilkinsburg, has moved up its game with Aspinwall. The contest will be a night affair at Crafton tomorrow instead of Saturday.

NEW RIVER WINS

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—New River State opened its football season last night with a 27-to-0 victory over a Charleston independent team. The Charleston eleven was composed of former high school and college players.

By TOM BIRKS

Ably led by the great Cliff Battles, who won his collegiate spurs at West Virginia Wesleyan, Boston won its first National Professional Football League game here last night at the expense of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Redskins defeated the locals, 21 to 6, and experienced little difficulty in doing so. A crowd of 15,000 watched the game.

Two former Pitt stars, Jim MacMurdo and Rip Collins, were in the starting lineup for the visitors, Jim at guard and Rip at end. Both played good football.

BATTLES TOO TOUGH

Battles, aided and abetted by one Ernie Pinckert, who was some pumpkins of a college star out California way, and Jim Musick, the big fullback, ran the local team ragged, and the impotent Pirate team seldom was in the ball game.

Right from the opening kickoff it became very apparent that the Pirates were going to have plenty of trouble stopping Battles. The cash customers had this brought forcibly to their attention early in the first period. Taking a good punt from Tesser on his own 30-yard line, the famous Gyp started out, and perfect blocking by Pinckert and Musick enabled him to race 70 yards across the Pirate goal line. Musick added the extra point.

MUSICK TALLIES

The second touchdown came in the third period, this time it was Musick that battered the Pirate front line to pieces. Musick scored and added the extra point.

Pittsburgh was listless and flashed nothing of the game it put up against Chicago last week. With Battles out of the game, La-Presta came in, and he and substitute Homer, after intercepting a Pittsburgh pass, smashed the Pirate line for another touchdown.

The only Pittsburgh score came in the final minutes of play when Moss took a 55-yard pass to the Redskin five-yard line, and a couple of plays later, Brovelli scored the lone touchdown. Mose Kelsh missed the try for the extra point.

In the matter of first downs, Boston had eight to Pittsburgh's five. A powerful line, with Battles, Musick and Pinckert doing their stuff in the backfield, was too much for Pittsburgh s eleven.

Art Rooney, president of the local club, today announced he had purchased the contract of Quarterback Westfall, former Ohio Wesleyan star, from Boston, and was on the lookout for additional talent.

CHISOX LEAD IN SERIES

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Chicago's Cubs, favorites in the city series with the White Sox, hoped to redeem themselves with their backers today after taking a 3-2 beating in the opening encounter.

Lon Warneke, who has had a rather luckless season, losing numerous games by one and two-run margins, probably will be on the mound for the Cubs. Manager Lew Fonseca has elected Ed Durham to do the Sox hurling.

The White Sox blasted Guy Bush for four hits and three runs in the second inning yesterday and it proved enough to give them the game. The score:

STRIBLING PAID LAST TRIBUTE

MACON, Ga., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The home town that cheered W. L. (Young) Stribling's departure for scores of excursions into the prize ring, said a last farewell today to the heavyweight boxer who died Tuesday, the victim of a motor accident.

The body rested in a casket in front of the palm-banked stage of the Municipal Auditorium as public funeral services were held this afternoon. National Guardsmen, standing at attention, provided a guard of honor.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. E. Simmons, of the First Baptist Church.

A detail of planes, piloted by fellow officers of the 457th pursuit squadron, air corps reserve, in which Stribling was a first lieutenant, flew over the cortege as it moved to the cemetery. In addition to his lieutenant's commission, Stribling held a transport pilot's license and piloted his own plane.

A veteran of 300 ring battles at 28, Stribling died from injuries received when he was knocked from his motorcycle in a collision with an automobile last Sunday.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Last spring, in California, Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, called George Gibson, manager of the Pirates, aside after an exhibition game and asked plaintively: . . . "Tell me the truth, do we look as bad as all THAT?" . . . "As bad as all WHAT?" asked Gibby . . "They're picking us to finish seventh," complained Terry . . . "Are we THAT bad?"

George Gibson

Gibby, a veteran of many campaigns, looked Terry in the eye and said: . . . "Listen, Bill, don't worry . . . I'd like to change places with you . . . They're picking me to win the pennant . . . I'm on the spot . . . If I don't win, I'll be a bum . . . If you finish better than seventh, you'll be a hero."

Today, Terry is the hero of Broadway, the winner of the National League championship leading his Giants against the Washington Senators in the World Series . . . Gibby is in Texas visiting with relatives, and listening to the World Series games over the radio . . . And fans are writing letters to the papers denouncing him for not winning the pennant . . . How true was his prophecy of six months ago!

Just a word for Gibby . . Isn't it possible that the fans and scribes expected too much of him when they settled upon the Pirates as the pennant winners even before the season got under way? . . Many things can happen between the spring training and the end of the campaign and many of them happened to the Pirates . . Any manager who can whip home a team in second place two years in a row can't be such a complete flop as some of the fans would have you believe.

Ken Stilley, former Clairton High School star, is making a strong bid as a sophomore for a tackle job on the Notre Dame eleven this fall. . . . Mike Layden, brother of Elmer, the Duquesne coach, of Four Horsemen fame, is a good halfback candidate. . . . It will be brother against brother when Pitt plays West Virginia Saturday. . . . Cheeso Onder will be at guard for Pitt and his younger brother, Angelo, at end for the Mountaineers. . . . Cheeso's correct name is Tarciscio, which is something, now that you think of it.

Well, as the clubs move on to Washington, it looks very much as if the same experts who picked the Giants to finish a high seventh in the National League pennant race are running true to form in having constituted a majority in picking the Senators to take the New York outfit in the World Series. . . . About the only safe bet left now is that if Congress were in session in Washington somebody could be depended upon to get up and make a speech and suggest that something ought to be done about the situation.—HARRY KECK.

PILOT CRONIN RETAINS FAITH

By JOE CRONIN,
Manager Washington Senators, American League Champions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—We're two down, now, and that means much ground to make up in five games, yet I have great faith in our Washington ball club and haven't given up hope of taking this World Series.

We still have Whitehill, a great left-hander, and Weaver, a fine pitcher from the right side, to toss at the Giants. They should put us right back in the series in the games to be played in Washington.

I have no alibis to offer for our loss in the second game. We were so clearly outbatted by the Giants we did not have a chance. Crowder pitched a fine ball game up to that sixth inning when the National Leaguers got all their runs for their 6-to-1 win and it looked as though he might get by O'Doul after getting two strikes on the pinch-batter sent up when the bases were loaded.

Well, the General didn't and that was all there was to it. But Crowder will be back in this series, and I believe he'll do a much better job of the pitching, too.

NICK PROMISES NEW DEAL FOR SENATORS

By NICK ALTROCK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—My friends and fellow citizens, if I had a shift key that would give you F. D.'s dialect on this typewriter, I would keep it pressed down till the last paragraph. But what I want to announce is that starting today we are going to have a new deal.

Nick Altrock

We dropped the first two games to the Giants to make them look good on their home grounds. But today is another day and from now on it's every team for itself, and you can bet your platinum to pewter our Washington lads still will come out ahead.

You don't have to subscribe to Roger Babson's charts to know that the next three games will be played on our home grounds. And now that we have these Giants in Washington, us Senators will make them look like the House of Representatives.

BAD 15 MINUTES

We were red hot to go in that second game only we had a bad 15 minutes. Still, that's all any of Bluebeard's wives had, I suppose.

But for the last half of the sixth inning I admit we must have looked like the Keokuk married men's team. But one headache doesn't mean a championship any more than one swallow makes a dipsomaniac.

Just remember, folks, the experts picked our Washington club to win the series and 50,000,000 Frenchmen can't be wrong.

The Terry outfit beat us again yesterday, as you've heard tell, but they are still just a wolf in sheik's clothing. And who's afraid of the big bad wolf, especially when we've got a brick stadium in Washington?

But there is one thing I will say for those Giants. They do more conferring in the middle of the diamond than the vice presidents of six national banks. I don't know what they're discussing, but I'll bet before the series is over, Bill Terry will be out of the game with hoarseness or sprained tonsils.

RYAN GREAT TALKER

And when it comes to Al Fresco chatter, this guy Blondy Ryan could strike a magpie dumb. For a while there this afternoon I thought Floyd Gibbons had borrowed a Giants' suit and was playing shortstop. But just talk doesn't rattle us Senators at all—not when we play all our home games in the same acoustics with Huey Long and Borah.

But if you are choking up on Washington's chances, let me take you into the archives of ancient history and stop at Anno Domini 1925. And if you peruse Papyrus, you will discover that in that year our Washington club won the first two games of the World Series and then finally managed to drop it to the Pittsburghs.

If you think we are in a hole, you ought to see the Grand Canyon.

GIANT HURLING TOO MUCH FOR NATS-TERRY

By BILL TERRY
Manager New York Giants, National League Champions

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The Giants entered the World Series with the idea that their pitching would overpower the Washington Senators, and it begins to look as though they had the situation properly pegged.

The Senators have now looked at Carl Hubbell and Hal Schumacher. They haven't won a game; they've secured only 10 hits in 18 innings, and have scored only one earned run.

That's pitching plus, and it's the kind that the Senators will have to bat against all through the series. Fred Fitzsimmons will do our third game pitching today, and he can throw that ball, too.

Schumacher's "sinker ball" had al the Senators, with the single exception of Goose Goslin, handcuffed. They stuck in a hit here and there, but when one meant a run, Schumacher's speed and courage turned them back.

That sixth inning was one of the most dramatic episodes of my baseball career. And I think it was the turning point of the series. We stopped the Senators when they had their chance to break through, but they couldn't stop us.

The Giants have that will to win, you know, and equally important, the pitching to support it.

Jackson and Lefty O'Doul shared the day's honors with the young pitcher. O'Doul's hit really got the six-run rally moving. He scored the two runs that gave the Giants the lead, and after that, the team simply wouldn't be stopped.

SERIES HURLING DOPE SPILLED

By BABE RUTH

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Two very persistent ideas which prevailed before the World Series got under way were completely shattered yesterday. One was that the Giants would be a setup for Alvin Crowder any time he was turned loose against them. The other was that none of the New York pitchers, aside of Hubbell, figured to hold the harder hitting Senators in check.

Babe Ruth

Hal Schumacher, who has served only this 1933 season as a big league regular, was not looked upon seriously by some of the experts. But the youngster went the full distance with only one run against him, that run a homer into the rightfield stand. The veteran Crowder, one of the American League's best pitchers for some years past, took the long trip to the dugout in the sixth.

I expect to see Crowder back, perhaps tomorrow, or Saturday. He is a fellow who can't get enough work to satisfy him, and he always wants to come back for another fling whenever he is knocked out by a team. I am sure he asked Joe Cronin today if he could not start tomorrow or Saturday.

Some will criticize Cronin for not taking Crowder out sooner, I think Joe was a bit too considerate, but it was easy to understand why. Crowder and Whitehill were the two pitchers he had to depend upon for the second and third games. Joe wanted to keep Whitehill for tomorrow, so he went the limit with Crowder, always certain that The General figured to do as well with any hitter at the plate, as any of his other pitchers might do.

The Senators were helpless against Schumacher, failing to get more than one hit in any inning, so they figured to lose. Any time a pitcher allows five hits at the rate of one per inning there is no reason for looking elsewhere for an answer.

Twelve Giants Voted, Six Elected in Big Inning

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Another Senatorial investigating committee met nine New York witnesses who didn't know nothing, couldn't remember nothing and who refused to talk.

It seems that the Manhattan bankers and athletes are all the same. The more you investigate them the tougher they get.

And when the harvest is in all you have for your work is the grief. It was the Giants' second day on the stand. And if it hadn't been for Goslin's homer the investigators would have been completely backgammoned.

There were 5,000 vacant seats, so all the firemen sat down.

Manager Cronin, of the good old Washingtons, complained that the infield was lumpy. The Giants smoothed it out in the sixth.

Exactly 36 of those dead National League baseballs were buried in grandstand pockets. Today it's Griff's turn to buy the marbles.

O'Doul Ready To Retire With Perfect Record

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(INS.)—"I really should retire now. One time up, one hit, batting average perfect."

That was Lefty O'Doul's comment after he pinch-hit a devastating blow in yesterday's Washington-New York game with the bags full of Giants. He added:

"The ball I hit was a curve. Say, and did I feel good when I saw it sailing away! How long has this World Series business been going on, anyway?"

It was a manly contribution to arts and sciences. The Goose web-footed his way around the bags quacking morosely at the foe. But his duckbilled solo was the berries compared with the barnyard chorus broadcast by the Giants in their one big inning.

Bugs Baer

All they had was one large inning. But it was overfed, ballon-sized and stuffed like Grandma's best feather bed. Twelve Giants registered, eight of them voted and six were elected.

Moore got himself two singles and even Hal Schumacher forgot his mother had raised him to be a pitcher. Hal positively clipped a single past third base while the four umpires helped the three official scorers to their feet, dusted them off and replaced their hats.

How President Can Encourage Bank Lending

—By B. C. FORBES—

To President Roosevelt:

WILL YOU please call in Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, Comptroller of the Currency O'Connor, Gov. Eugene R. Black of the Federal Reserve Board, Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and explain to them that you are anxious to have banks incur reasonable risks in making loans, and that you do not want banks making such loans to be officially criticised or penalized for so doing.

Mr. Forbes

Perhaps you could communicate with all Governors of states and recommend that they instruct their banking departments to follow a similar course.

Heretofore there has been flagrant lack of harmony between your announced attitude and the daily conduct of bank examiners.

Cure this, and bankers promise helpful results.

THIS COMPLAINT, made to me by the responsible head of one bank, is typical of many:

"Our bank is abnormally liquid. We have more cash than anything else. We eagerly grant every safe loan requested. But there aren't nearly enough such loans to employ our facilities. Wherever we make a loan which isn't strictly in accordance with established, conservative banking rules and regulations, the bank examiners call us on the carpet and tell us we must either have it repaid or set aside a large part of the amount to meet possible loss.

"Naturally, we don't feel encouraged to make loans for which we are punished."

THE PRESIDENT of a nationally-known bank, who has been conducting an exhaustive investigation, tells me:

"I don't mind telling you in confidence that so far our analysis shows that the criticism and newspaper statements about lack of credit are not justified, unless you want to turn the banks into Christmas trees.

"The fact is that banks who did a second, third and fourth-grade business have practically all closed their doors because their clients could not meet their obligations. This type of clientele has nowhere to go now and does not understand the economics of the situation."

A VERY different slant is presented by a non-banker, William Feather. Thus:

"It used to be said that there were three reasons for not trying to be successful in business in a certain city—the First National Bank; the Second National Bank; the Third National Bank. We will assume that these three conservative banks were licensed to reopen after the moratorium.

In many other cities banks strained every rule of good banking to help their cities to become places where industry was brisk and profitable. In those cities, as a general rule, not all the banks reopened.

"A friend of mine is ready to bet that the towns where banks failed will move ahead faster and further in the next ten years than the towns in which no banks failed.

"The same spirit is still in those towns. Laws may curb their new banks, but by some method of financing they will find the money again to build fast and daringly."

IF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT acts on the suggestion here made, bank lending would become at least somewhat more liberal. And the stern logic of events may impel Congress, as soon as feasible after it convenes in January, to make the security act more practicably workable.

AFTER ALL, money makes the mare go.

BUSINESS

Construction Program Begins to Show Results

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

GOVERNMENT EFFORTS to put money into circulation and to help employment by pushing public works projects and giving aid to leading industries had a slow start, but actual results are beginning to appear.

This phase of the recovery program is of utmost importance since it will provide a demand for capital goods—that is materials which will go into permanent structures rather than the type of materials which are immediately consumed. Industries supplying capital goods were hit harder by the depression than those supplying consumer goods.

The electrical industry, steel producers and makers of building materials are dependent on the demand for capital goods for most of their sales.

* * *

Start of Jobs Requires Time

MUCH DISAPPOINTMENT has been expressed that so little progress has been made in getting actual work started on these projects. It must be realized, however, that time is needed for the engineering and architectural work before actual construction can be started. In addition a suitable plan for financing must be drawn up before the government can give aid. Legal difficulties also have delayed work in some places.

During the past week the first large orders have started to reach industry. This will mean improved employment in industrial plants in the near future and eventually increased employment at the points where the improvements are to be made.

* * *

First Orders Reach Market

REAL EVIDENCE that the projects are progressing from preliminary stages to actual construction includes the following:

Railroads are expected to buy over 1,000,000 tons of rails and track fastenings with government help.

Inland Steel has a contract for 7,800 tons for a breakwater at Calumet, Mich., subject to approval by United States Engineers, as well as 1,100 tons of piling for a dam at Nash[illegible] Tenn.

Other orders include a long list of tonnages for the Navy Department as well as additional material for river and harbor improvements.

The Boulder Dam project was started by the previous administration but the work is being pushed actively and this has released many large orders for steel.

The Department of the Interior has ordered four electrical generators, largest in the world. Two of them will be made by Westinghouse.

Reliance Reports Increase in Sales

Gains in the sale of new life, accident and health insurance in September and for the third quarter of 1933, compared with the same periods of 1932, are reported by the Reliance Life Insurance Company of Pittsburgh.

September sales totaled $3,564,832 life insurance, an increase of 2.84%; $596,500 accident insurance, an increase of 52%; and $3,455 weekly indemnity health insurance, an increase of 29%.

In the third quarter, lift insurance sales amounted to $12,121,212, an increase of 1.31%; insurance $1,792,133, an increase of 2%; and weekly indemnity insurance $8,985.50, an increase of 12.7%.

STOCKS KEEP GAINS; BULLISH FERVOR COOLS

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Bullish fervor cooled in financial markets today, but securities generally managed to hold major portions of their yesterday's substantial gains.

Wall street continued to watch its pocket-book with one eye and Washington with the other. Although the activity in stocks dwindled appreciably, commission houses generally voiced restrained optimism and there was some expansion of odd-lot buying which is always a hopeful indicator to veteran operators. At the same time, professionals accounted for the majority of transactions and even they displayed some hesitancy in their "in-and-out" maneuvers. Grains, cotton and other commodities were rather listless. Bonds were a little irregular. The dollar again moved up in foreign exchange dealings.

The utility shares, for a change, showed resistance while most other equity groups were inclined to relinquish some of their previous advances.

Some brokerage circles that only recently were highly vociferous in their approval of drastic currency inflation, apparently have switched their attitude on this question. These converts to the "sound money" ranks now are arguing that dollar stabilization, instead of being an extremely bearish market factor, would be bullish in that it would indicate the administration is confident the recovery movement is proceeding satisfactorily.

On the other hand, various Wall street economists are decidedly hesitant in predicting the course of security prices in the event that the money unit is stabilized on a new gold basis. Nervousness of speculators and investors regarding the future value of the dollar, however, is believed to have been the principal reason for the erratic behavior of stocks and bonds during the past several weeks.

The meeting today in Washington of the British delegation with representatives of the Treasury to discuss war-debts was watched closely by market observers. While this meeting was of a preliminary nature, serious conversations on the debt question are expected to get under way in the next few days. Various bankers are of the opinion that any scaling down, or settlement, of the debt problem must carry with it some agreement on currency stabilization, both as regards the dollar and the pound sterling.

WHEAT CLOSES WEAK, DOWN

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Maximum setbacks of almost two cents a bushel in wheat took place today, largely owing to a liquidating movement which disclosed dearth of aggressive buying.

Scattered demand developed later as a consequence of relative strength of the Winnipeg market, where cash wheat was quoted at above a delivery basis.

Wheat closed weak, 1⅜-1¾ under yesterday's finish, corn 1⅞-2¼ down, oats 1½-1⅞ off, and provisions varying from 20 cents decline to a rise of 7 cents.

MIXED FORCES BALK DEFINITE STOCK TREND

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Market forces are much mixed, and it seems improbable that any sustained move in either direction is to be expected.

But I regard the short side as the more dangerous of the two. That being the case, it would seem to follow that one should either do nothing just now or lean a little to moderate purchases of carefully selected issues, favoring those which would benefit by probable administration policies.

The chief policies to consider are credit expansion, public works and the ultimate revaluation of the dollar.

WORKS PROGRAM STARTING

There is some probability that a big move to expand bank credit may act as a "rabbit" in the near future. Signs are evident that the slow-moving public works program is getting under way, which would furnish a basis for bulldog stocks connected with construction industries.

Eventually, it is probable the dollar will be revalued in terms of gold. I think this step is quite a way in the future, but earlier moves to stabilize dollar exchange are likely to keep revaluation before the public. Since revaluation will probably be on a low basis which would tend to raise commodity prices, the whole performance will probably give more support to bulls than to bears—at least at these levels.

HOPES CONFLICT

Whatever happens, the market forces are very mixed. You see this in the fact that some people have been buying stocks on the hope of inflation, and others have bought on the hope of "stabilization."

If the recovery program goes through, it seems that inflation is to be soft pedaled. But that would help some stocks and hurt others.

Under such mixed conditions I would be suspicious of any broad general market moves. Logically the moves should now be selective.

Personally, I doubt that mere credit inflation and steps to expand bank loans can accomplish much at present. If technical conditions are right, the market will rally, and traders would then talk about bank credit expansion. This is about all.

But I think we can count on the thought of an eventual revaluation of the dollar at a low level in terms of gold being always in the background, and that this will prevent any sustained decline based on the fear of a collapse of the "inflation stocks."

MAY JUSTIFY PRICES

The ultimate revaluation seems likely to be such that it will justify prices of certain stocks at recent levels. My reasoning is that it would be designed to support the dollar price of gold and commodities and that those companies that produce commodities which have a low percentage of labor cost are likely to benefit, especially where burdensome excess supplies do not exist. These might include metals, sugars and oils.

On the technical side, one can say that the usual course of intermediate movements in the stock market suggests that the reactionary phase should be nearly at an end. This suggestion is supported by the dullness and "drying up of volume" on the decline.

DECLINE TAPERS OFF

Furthermore, the declining trend has tapered off perceptibly, and signs of stronger resistance to selling drives have appeared.

There may be sense in the feeling of some that a final day of climax selling would put the market in better shape for a sustained rally. I am inclined to doubt that an upward move beginning right here will go very far.

But I feel that even if there were to be a "clamax" day on the downside, the market would soon come back to present levels, with a good possibility of closing the gap left on September 21—which is 6-6 points above recent low levels.

CHAPTER XXV.

"I know that, all right," Durant replied. "But proving it—that's something else. Sue, I just called you a little idiot. But you're a brave little idiot. To rehearse that killing with Crelliman—I should think you'd have had genuine hysterics, not merely pretended tears."

"Jack, you say you know who killed her. You wouldn't tell me that simply to make me feel better?"

He shook his head. "I'd never deceive you, Sue, not for any reason in the world."

"Is that a rebuke because I deceived you, because I pretended to distrust you? Jack, you once wouldn't have been unkind to me."

"I don't mean to be now. I think it's time I took you home."

She smiled mockingly. "My chauffeur brought me. He's been with us since I was born. I need no other bodyguard. Or are you in a hurry to get rid of me? But of course. The lovely thing in pajamas won't be complaisant too long. That would be too much to expect. How long has it been going on?

"Let's go," he said, rising.

"You mean she'll make a scene? Don't be absurd, Jack. You're not the kind of man to let your mistress misbehave."

He looked down at her. "I suppose it would be silly to tell you that she's not my mistress?"

"Chivalrous, not silly. Though why you should be chivalrous about a girl like that I wouldn't know. You said a moment ago you'd never deceive me. Why try it now?"

"I'm not," he told her.

"I'm not a baby, Jack, so why lie to me? Why, Crelliman told me that Gertie Waxted was living with you."

"Really?" His eyebrows raised. "How did her name happen to come into the conversation?"

Worried About Tom

She shrugged her pretty shoulders. "I think he rather liked me. You know, to a man like that any girl is just another girl. He knows that we were once engaged. If he could prove to me how completely you had forgotten——"

"Good God, you didn't flirt with him!"

She shrugged again. "I wasn't rude to him in his own house. Oh, Jack, don't be silly." She rose suddenly to her feet. "Perhaps you'd like to know that I didn't believe I'd find a girl here. Somehow, I didn't think that you—oh, I know what men are and I don't mind. Only, I'd sort of hoped—but it really doesn't matter what I hope, does it?"

She faced him as he stood motionless by the couch. Into her eyes and voice came anguish.

"I stay here talking this way—as if it mattered what you do so long as you'll save Tom. Jack, can you do it?"

"God knows, Sue. But I think so. I honestly think so." His voice suddenly took on a note of excitement. He quenched it instantly. "Good night, Sue."

She held out her hand to him. "Jack," she whispered, "don't think I mind too much because you have Miss Waxted here. And I can't say that I blame her. You're a most attractive man. Good night."

He watched her go through the doorway; he waited until he heard the elevator door in the hall outside open and close. Then he dashed across the living room and threw open the bedroom door.

Suppressed Emotion

"Gone impetuous? Did she give you ideas?" At another time he would have seen the tears in her eyes, would have noticed the quaver in her voice. But now he was aware of neither of these signs of suppressed emotion.

He hardly heard her words as he ran back into the living room and called up Tony Gazotti. His gray eyes were burning.

"Tony? Durant speaking. You haven't any idea where Murtoch is this minute?"

"Murtoch? It's hard enough nursing you along and keeping an eye out for Crelliman without being a human directory. But I could find out. It might take the rest of the night, but I can try. What's the idea?"

"Too long to explain. But send around town; find out where he is and let me know. I'll be waiting up."

He hung up and instantly dialed police headquarters. But Lieut. Stevens, for whom he asked, had gone home. From a drawer he took an address book and flipped its pages until he found Stevens' home telephone number. A moment later a sleepy, protesting voice answered his ring.

"Durant? What's biting you at this hour of the night?"

"I've got a scheme. I want you to help me. I think I can get the killer of Mimi Montagne. Bring two men with you in plain clothes."

"Still sticking to ginger ale?" asked the lieutenant.

"I'm sober," said Durant, hanging up.

"I'll say you are," said Gertie from the doorway of the bedroom. "That's what burns me. If you were cockeyed I'd not mind it so much. I'd tell myself that the old hooch had been working on your conscience."

She was fully clothed, even to the jaunty hat she had jammed upon her wavy hair. The resentment in her eyes did not detract from her beauty.

"Well?" Bewildered resentment was in her eyes as she stood before him. "I won't be a little idiot. I'll be sane. And I guess you're right. You're crazy about her, and if she wants me out—"

He put an arm around her shoulders and drew her toward him, but she was rigid in protest.

"Don't kiss me. Don't ever kiss me. Not unless you mean—not unless you're crazy about me. I thought I could be happy if I got you; that it didn't matter whether you cared for me or not. But it does. Oh, I wouldn't expect you to marry me. But just to kill time—don't please."

"Gertie, I know who killed Mimi. It's a hundred to one I'm right, but I've got to have evidence, evidence that will convince a jury. And I think I can get it."

"When did you get this idea?" she asked wonderingly.

"From Sue."

"Sue? What does she know about it?"

"She doesn't know she knows. No one ever knows he knows. If people knew, crime would be more easily solved. But they don't. They forget to tell you the little things that seem unimportant to them."

"Has she suddenly remembered that Tom Siddal was with her at the time he's supposed to have killed Mimi?" Gertie's eyes darkened as she saw the sudden anger on his face. "Oh, I'm sorry I said that. I didn't mean it—only I've been lying in that bed wanting to come out and put the burn-up on her. High-hatting you, because you went the way you wanted to go. That was it, wasn't it? That's what the gossip writers said when she aired you. And now that her new sweetie's in trouble, she comes to you. What did she tell you?"

Asks Girl's Help

"From Murtoch's window I saw her enacting the murder with Crelliman on his porch. Now, don't ask why she was there. I'm trying to think. She said that Crelliman went just about goofy at rehearsing the scene. Why wouldn't he? It was a murder that he had ordered, even if he didn't fire the actual shot. But don't you see?"

"This is Tony. It didn't take any time at all to locate Murtoch. I rushed a boy up to that speak where you saw him and the barkeep said he got a taxi and sent him home. It's a dollar to a dime he's up at his apartment now, shooting himself full of hop trying to forget Levitoff."

"Much obliged, Tony. I'll be seeing you." Durant turned to the girl. "Gertie, you have plenty of nerve. Have you enough to go down to Crelliman's apartment now? Have you enough nerve to tell him that you moved in with me to find out what I had on him? And that when you found out that I hadn't a thing you decided to go back to the side you belonged on? Can you get him out on that penthouse porch?"

"A girl can do a lot of things if she has what it takes to make a man agreeable," she replied. "Crelliman never gave me a tumble, but it could be done. If he didn't shoot me on sight."

Durant shook his head. "He wouldn't do that. He'd want to hear you talk. Anyway, he wouldn't do anything like that in his own apartment. And I'll have you covered all the way down there, and there'll be people outside the building, and I'll be in Crelliman's apartment myself before you've been there too long. Will you go? Can you do it?"

"I can try," she replied. "What do you want me to do?"

MORMONS THE COLONIZERS OF UTAH

Brigham Young, the leader of this religious communal sect, took the congregation to the Great Salt Lake valley (1847) after the founder, Joseph Smith, had been lynched in Illinois. By their diligent farming and trading, profiting too by the passing stream of fortune seekers traveling to California, they became prosperous. Later they discontinued polygamy, abiding by the federal law, and their territory was admitted as "Utah" into the Union (1896). (U. S. History.)

MARIA THERESA ASKING MAGYARS AID (1741)

Menaced by the invasion of Prussian Frederick the Great, allied with France, Spain and Bavaria, (Austrian succession war) the young heiress to Hapsburg's lands (1740-1780) obtained help from Hungary. She regained her provinces, except Silesia (1748), and even enlarged Austria with portions of Poland. (World History.)

ENGLAND'S FIRST BOOK

This book was the "Dictes and Sayings of the Philosophers," a translation from French by Earl Rivers, the brother-in-law of King Edward IV. The book, first printed in England, published by Caxton in 1477, was presented by the translator, as the picture shows, to King Edward IV. (Garnett: English Literature)

FLOW DIAGRAM OF SULPHURIC ACID CONTACT PROCESS

Recent installations employ a vanadium catalyst to accelerate the reaction between SO2 and O. This is cheaper and more resistant against "poisoning" by arsenic, chlorine and other impurities than the formerly used platinum catalyst.

Sulphur is melted and allowed to settle, eliminating sand, etc., before it is burned in the furnace. The resulting SO2 and air mixture is cooled in a boiler (generating steam for the sulphur melting pot), then filtered from dust and led into the converter, charged with the catalyst to form SO3. This is cooled, then absorbed by sulphuric acid solution circulating in packed towers and giving a fuming sulphuric acid. After subsequent cooling the acid is led through a drying tower to retain the acid vapors and to allow the remaining gases to escape. (Rogers: Industrial Chemistry.)

FURRING AND CORBELING MASONRY WALLS

Walls are "furred"—light wood or metal strips of lath applied inside for holding a thin layer of plaster or stucco—to obtain a smooth finish and (creating an air space between plaster and wall) better insulation from heat and moisture. Different methods of furring are shown above.

THE AMERICAN LARCH (Larix Larcina)

It belongs to the family Pinaceae, genus Larix. The needles are lineal of triangular cross section mostly clustered. They fall off in winter. The staminate flowers are sessile, sub-globose, yellow; the pistillate flowers are oblong, reddish. The fruit is an ovoid cone, its scales containing the winged seeds. The tree grows in swampy soil, on river banks and on hillsides from West Virginia past the Arctic Circle. It gives a heavy, hard, strong, durable wood used for posts, poles, railroad ties and ships. STRUCTURE OF THE ROOT OF A SEED PLANT

The root of a seed plant—generally the organ of attachment and absorption of food in solution—consists essentially of three primary tissue systems (epidermis, cortical and stele or central system), which develop from the growing point of the shoot downward. The root cap is a bunch of cells protecting the growing point, steadily replaced as they are rubbed off. (b, c, d, d' and e) are highly magnified sections of regions of the tissue systems of root (a). (From Densmore). (Woodruff: Foundations of Biology)

Hold 'Em Tizzleburg!

And never the twain shall meet until Saturday afternoon when the professors will squat on the concrete thrones of learning and recite the monotonous but thrilling, "We want a touchdown!"

Then you will hear the prexy scream, "Hold 'Em, Tizzleburg!"

Then you will listen to the dean yelling that simple but complex sentence, "Block that kick."

It proves that education is not in vain. The books make nice seat cushions.

The teachers are wise when they attend classes on the five-yard line. There is nothing like a boot in the face to prepare the mentality for the proper reception of dead languages and ancient history.

The smart professor rushes out on the field with the waterboy, bends over the unconscious athlete and asks, "Young man, what is the Latin equivalent of the abtruse angle of hydraulic reflexes when an irresistible body meets indestructible luggage?"

We tell the truth when coming out of ether. And the professor knows it. That's why the educational semester is divided into huddles and time out for repairs.

So the teachers are improving each shining hour and also polishing up the split seconds. They are chumming with their students and enjoying the ambulance rides.

The only thing that has been wrong, with our colleges in the past is that the professors wouldn't go where the students were.

Now, instead of acting as master of ceremonies to a hundred empty desks, the deans and the prexies are mingling with the eager youths and instructing them in tearing up goal posts and the fine arts.

A Masterly Argument

J. F. Guffey Presents Convincing Reasons for the Building of Flood Reservoirs By the NRA.

Pittsburgh and the entire tri-state area can take satisfaction in the manner in which the arguments in favor of the building of flood reservoirs by the National Recovery Administration were presented at the hearing held in Washington yesterday by the Mississippi Drainage Area Board.

Especially impressive was the speech of Joseph F. Guffey, who has been indefatigable in his work for flood protection and deserves the thanks of this community.

Mr. Guffey's plea was lucid, forceful and convincing, and we confidently expect that it will also prove successful.

Tube Toll Inadvisable

The Plan to Charge Autoists for the Use of the Liberty Tunnels Should Be Abandoned.

Public sentiment is unfavorable, and rightly so, to the plan of the County Commissioners to charge a five-cent toll for the use of the Liberty Tubes by autoists.

The tunnels were built with the understanding that they were to be free, and real estate was bought and homes built with that understanding. To charge toll would be unfair to people who have moved into the South Hills and might depreciate the value of real estate.

The County Commissioners should drop the plan.

Tolls may reasonably be charged for the use of new tunnels and bridges, but not for the use of tunnels and bridges for which the people voted bonds with the understanding that they were to be free.

More Water Polluters

The City of Pittsburgh was forced to spend more than $1,100 a day in the early part of last month to combat the contamination of its water supply by coal mines on the Kiskiminetas and its tributaries.

The Bureau of Water reports that for some unexplained reason the water power dam on the Clarion River near Clarion has been lowered and water black as ink, polluted by the paper mills at Johnsonburg and by vegetation on the watershed, is pouring into the Allegheny River at the rate of 1,000,000,000 gallons a day, as against a normal discharge of about one-tenth that amount.

We are warned that in about four days we may expect a slight discoloration and a slightly disagreeable taste in the water.

The power company should not be permitted to let loose the foul flood.

Abatement of stream pollution was one of the planks in Gifford Pinchot's platform when he ran for Governor. He might well give further attention to the subject.

Surveying the Universe

The Allegheny Observatory, in Riverview Park, North Side, is playing every night to packed houses. It is booked in full to November 1, the end of its season, and is turning hundreds away.

Several thousand years ago, when Job complained of the injustice of God, the Lord answered him out of the whirlwind and said:

"Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion? Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons? Knowest thou the ordinances of heaven?"

By thus pointing to the celestial phenomena, the marvel of the ancient world as of the modern, the Lord convinced Job of his ignorance.

Slowly but steadily, however, our ignorance of the heavens is being dispelled. Pittsburghers will find cause for pride in the important part that local astronomers are taking in extending the frontiers of our knowledge.

The Allegheny Observatory has just measured the distance from the earth of its 1,208th star. The star is No. 5 in the constellation known as Canes Venatici, which lies near the Big Dipper under the handle. Canes Venatici is Latin for "hunting dogs"; the ancients, forming the stars into pictures, represented the dogs as being held in leash by Bootes the Herdsman, as he pursues the Great Bear about the Pole.

No. 5 of Canes Venatici has been found by the Allegheny Observatory to be 609 trillion miles away. A rough idea of the immensity of this distance may be gained from a comparison: It takes the light of the sun, traveling at the rate of 186,300 miles a second, eight minutes to reach the earth; but it takes the light of No. 5 of Canes Venatici, traveling at the same speed, 103 years to reach us.

With its 30-inch photographic refractor, not the largest, but for photographic purposes the best telescope in the world, the Allegheny Observatory began its measurement of star distances in 1914. It has now measured one-fifth of the approximately 6,000 stars visible to the naked eye, and is adding new stars to its list at the rate of about 100 a year.

In addition, it is observing about 1,000 double stars, and photographing stars with infra-red light, and making minutely accurate measurements of the wave-lengths of the elements with the spectroscope.

And yet, notwithstanding this accumulation of knowledge so awesome to the layman, Dr. F. C. Jordan, director of the observatory, admits that the heavens continue to present mysteries.

Science can offer no explanation, for example, for the novae, stars which suddenly appear in the sky, remain for a few weeks, and then disappear. One made its appearance on February 22, 1901; the next night it was the brightest star in the heavens; but by July it had vanished.

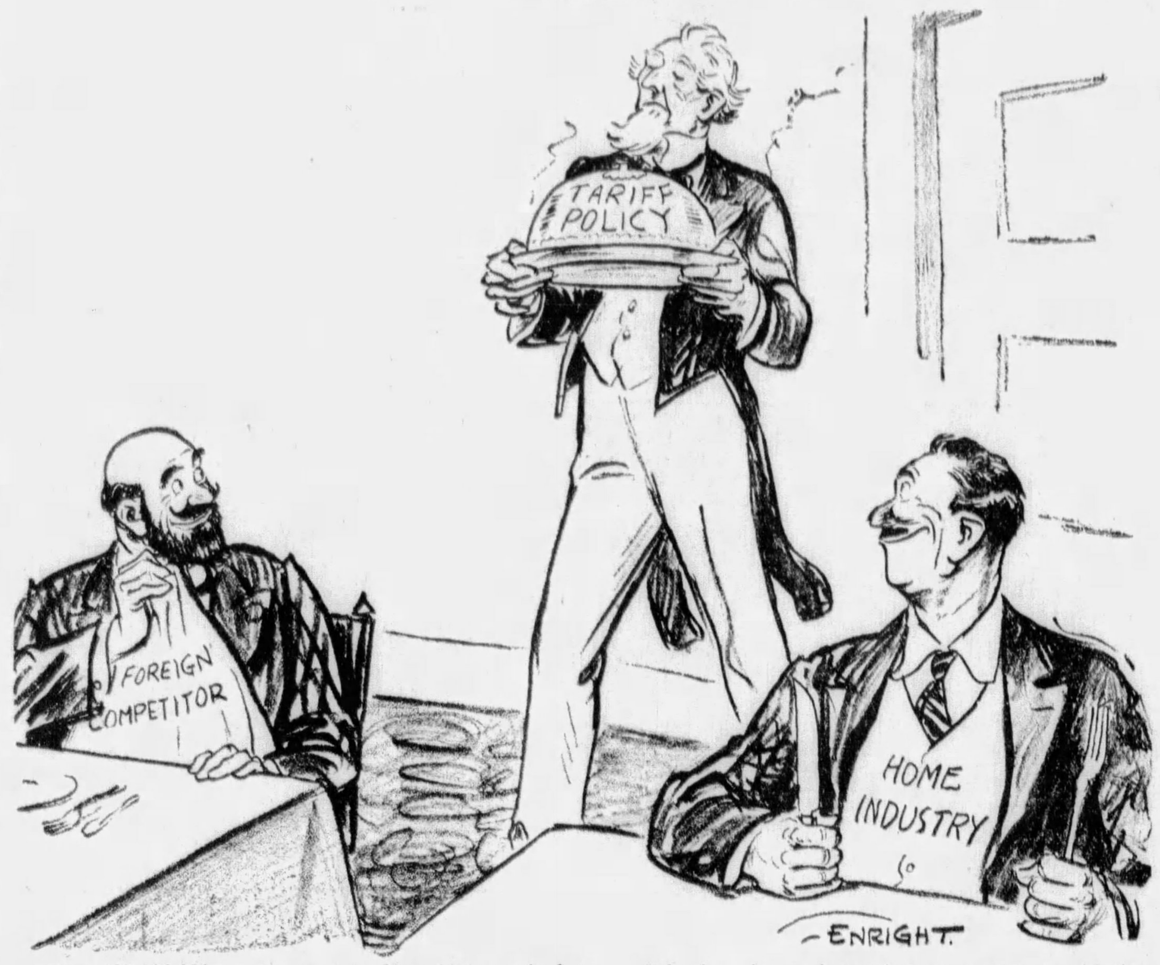
With or without understanding the pageant of the skies is a thrilling spectacle; for, in the words of the Psalmist:

"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

Life becomes a finer experience with appreciation of the wonders of the universe. And Pittsburghers have a splendid opportunity to acquire such appreciation in the facilities that the Allegheny Observatory offers.

Which Is It For?

(Copyright, 1933.)



With 125,000,000 people accustomed to a high standard of living, the American home market is the greatest market in the world.

And with at least 11,000,000 of our workers still idle, it is the Federal Government's duty to PROTECT the home market.

Lack of protection permits foreign countries, with low wages and even low standards of living, to flood our home market with cheap products.

In a wide-open home market either we must see home industries ruined and jobs destroyed or the American wage scale must be debased to a competitive level with cheap foreign labor.

In other words, shall we benefit foreigners and injure ourselves by inadequate tariffs, or shall we save the home market for our own industries and our own workers?

Our tariff policy contains the answer.

Why Deflate the Love-Interest?

The things which pass for "love", nowadays, are almost as numerous as the things which pass for "heart-failure".

* * *

The average American understands business, baseball, politics, machinery and golf; but in matters of love and women, he is practically an ostrich with his head in the sand—continually fooling himself.

Funny, how a man always begins a "reform movement," by reforming the women. Just at this moment Premier Mussolini's chief interest in Inflation appears to be inflating the feminine figure.

* * *

* * *

Why is the woman who helps herself to another woman's husband always so surprised when she discovers that he's the kind that can easily be stolen by any younger or prettier woman who cares to annex him?

* * *

A girl used to veil her emotions in mystery—but when a modern girl sets her heart on a man, her designs are as easy to see through as cellophane.

A husband may not be a vital necessity to a self-reliant, up-to-date woman, but he will always be an adornment. Perhaps "she travels fastest who travels alone"—but she is not invited to half so many nice parties.

* * *

The happiest marriage in the world is that of two young people who start life together, with nothing but a job, a shoestring and a mutual ambition.

* * *

Love is only temporarily blind; and when a girl agrees to a long engagement, she is merely giving a man a chance to get his eyes wide open.

ATLANTIC CITY DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. Oct. 5.—The Atlantic City chair pusher, to me, occupies the most forlorn niche in the occupational scale. He is the American coolie. In the manner of the tired horse, he responds to the command of a master, with a flick of his head and trudges on.

Some are garrulous on occasions but mostly the monotonous grind has worn them down to scattery monosyllables. They are like flotsam tossed up by the sea—human driftwood eddied to seashore sands. Now and then a rather shame-faced boy but mostly old, broken down, rachitic.

Their tatters suggest the incredible filth among the human castaways under the spans of the Seine. Black, white and an occasional Chinese, they are in charge of padrones who stir them out of lethargy as the steamboat mate does the roustabouts. The air turns blue.

Many have combed beaches on the outer ridges of the world—the South Sea Islands and the like. Crack the shell of reserve and a few can talk of Shanghai's Bund, the Southern Cross and wild dives in Harbin and Port Said. The pay is largely tips. Roller chairs are 75 cents an hour.

The nor'easter that lashed into fury became a so'easter toward dawn. I had phoned a telephone girl for a little comfort while the building seemed to go into a shimmy. A staunch structure, it was merely a harp string in the gale. "I'm just down from the mountains," I jittered. "Does your hotel act up this way often?" She explained if it did not sway there would be real danger. "Pick up a book and read," she said. "It will soon be over." A half hour later I was still holding a phone book upside down.

* * *

There is a certain misspent artistry about the sand sculptors whose handiworks adorn the seaside of the boardwalk. In the fashion of the London screever, they sculp their masterpieces and depend upon tossed coins from passersby. Each plate has a few decoy coins. One of them affected a Latin Quarter dress, velvet tam, green open throated shirt and corduroys. Gazing awhile, I observed: "Anyway——" But Harry Silvey finished it up with that impulsive casualness of the brighter minded: "It keeps him out in the open air."

* * *

Every pleasure resort has its promenade of Ladies Who Smile and Glance Back and Atlantic City is no exception. Here they try to express a summary look. Gaudy pajamas, pigeon blood toe nails showing through open sandals and cigaret puffing through long holders.

* * *

Among the yum yums that deserve high huzzah is the local macaroon. There are shops that bake them hourly and constant mist helps keep them soggily toothsome. Salt water taffy is another tasty—Diamond Jim used to eat four pounds in an hour's chair ride. But not for those with bridgework that is trembly. It's only for George Olsen sort of teeth.

* * *

And a hat should be doffed to boardwalk sellers of post-cards. They display: "We gladly furnish stamps." I have thought that in Utopia there will be a waiter who will consent to bring coffee to those who want it with meals and a genius seller who will hand out postcards all ready stamped.

* * *

When a sort of a police whistle shrills the boardwalk and shore becomes taut. Then a scurry for the rail and water edge. Sometimes it is only a life saver warning a swimmer beyond his depths. But more often it's a prelude to launching a life boat and rushing to rescue.

Not all the life-guards are the dashing Apollos of fiction. Harry Richman and Al Davis, I believe, are of the guild and handsome collegiates are often so employed. But many here are stolid, middle-aged. Not the sort to inspire potential "Miss America," feigning distress, for help in hope of romance.

This evening decided to brave the chill for a quick dip. The beach was deserted so they couldn't jeer. Others he advertising?" But after inching out ankle deep I turned all of a sudden blue not one of my colors. So I loped, gazelle back to my room just in time to hear my wife tell someone, on the phone I was the type who likes valise sales. If not one time it's another.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Thousands of letters come to this desk weekly. More than half of those letters are from men and women over 40. Miserable men and women who feel their lives going to pieces, but don't know what to do about it, so try to ease their pain by railing against society, against fate.

"Why should things end like this for me?" each one cries.

"I've always done the best I could. Of course I've made mistakes; done some things I'm sorry for. But, in the main, I've tried to act as my parents taught me. Yet nothing has turned out right.

"It can't be my fault. For, once upon a time, if a person was honest and kind and hard-working, he got along fine. But that isn't so any more. No matter how hard I try, things won't turn out right. There must be something wrong with the world. It's no use trying to be decent any more. The world's gone crazy."

Bitter, bewildered lives like that—is yours one of them? Are you "trying to do your best, and getting nowhere?" Do you, too, think "there's something wrong with the world?"

There isn't. The world's all right, partner. But it's growing. It's growing and changing faster than ever before in its history. During the last fifty years this world has changed more than in the preceding five hundred years.

That has meant some tough hustling for the humans who have lived through those fifty years. It has meant one difficult adjustment after another. Learning to live in new ways, use new tools, think new thoughts, meet new conditions. And, almost as soon as one lesson was learned, it had to be discarded and another tackled.

Why are so many of us who are over forty bitter and bewildered?

That's why. We have refused to do these things.

Long ago, as children, we learned one way of living. It was a way of living which our fathers and grandfathers had used before us, with little change, for hundreds of years. They believed in that way of living. They believed that if people lived that way they could be healthy and happy, prosperous and popular. They taught us these things, and we started to operate in the same old rut.

Then along came the Machine Age, and the world started turning cartwheels! Cartwheels of progress they really were great, whirling leaps forward toward a new age. But most of us couldn't see it. We could only see that we were jolted out of our comfortable rut; that the old rules wouldn't work.

And so today you are facing life heart-sick and confused. What's the matter?

YOU'RE THE MATTER.

Life's all right. The world's all right. They both are raising whoopee, but it's healthy whoopee. And you'd have a swell time if you'd join in. But that's the trouble—you won't join in.

YOU ARE TRYING TO HANG ON TO YOUR OLD HABITS, YOUR OLD IDEALS, YOUR OLD WAYS OF DOING THINGS—AND IT CAN'T BE DONE.

And you've no right to expect that it can be done. If you built a house in the path of an avalanche, you'd have no right to be peeved if the avalanche roared down over you and smashed you to smithereens.

That is exactly what is happening now. Life in 1933 is an avalanche. The coming of machines has changed everything; speeded up everything. If you won't change—if you won't speed up—then it's just your bad luck.

YOU'VE GOT TO THINK IN NEW WAYS.

YOU'VE GOT TO THINK IN NEW WAYS ABOUT OTHER PEOPLE, AND YOUR RELATIONSHIP TO THEM, AND THEIR RRIGHTS.

YOU'VE GOT TO THINK IN NEW WAYS ABOUT YOUR COUNTRY—WHAT A DEMOCRACY SHOULD REALLY DO.

YOU'VE GOT TO THINK IN NEW WAYS ABOUT LIFE. YOU'VE GOT TO SEE THAT LIFE ISN'T JUST THE PETTY, PERSONAL PROGRAM WHICH IT WAS FOR YOUR FATHER, BUT THAT IT IS A VAST, IMPERSONAL PERFOMANCE WHICH HAS NO PLACE FOR SLACKERS OR SLOW-POKES.

You've got to do all these things, if you want to live powerfully and pleasantly in 1933.

And if you won't?

Why then, my friend, I suspect you'll just have to take the consequences. For it's a cinch that life isn't going to stop to coax you into line.

A Hospital for Animals—Poor Children's Pets Are Treated at Clinic—Rags, the First Division's Mascot

By EDWIN C. HILL

I HAVE just had the interesting experience of visiting the Ellen Prince Speyer Hospital for Animals, where 18,000 sick or injured four-footed creatures are treated every year. A five-story building in the heart of Manhattan houses a clinic, dispensary and operating theater and surgical, observation and isolation wards, and in charge of all is one of the most remarkable women I know. She is Mrs. George Bethune Adams. She is 82, but works with the energy and enthusiasm of a girl.

You should see that clinic as I have just seen it, crowded with poor children bringing in their beloved mutts to be doctored for broken limbs, infections or sickness. Some carried their ailing pets in their arms. Others wheeled them proudly in baby carriages or little home-made wooden carts.

You should have seen the trust and confidence in the faces of those worried children. And you should have seen, too, the trust in the eyes of the dogs, for they seemed to know what it was all about—to understand that they were there to be freed of illness and pain, and that no harm would come to them. You could look in their eyes and read their thoughts. And I shall say something about that a little later—the ability of dogs to think.

Animals, it seems, are affected with most of the diseases common to human beings, and the hospital treatment is pretty much the same, Mrs. Adams tells me. Walking through the wards one sees a regular hospital chart tacked to every cage. The charts record pneumonia, gastritis, low blood-pressure and all sorts of ailments familiar to humans, as well as the usual dog diseases.

Every one of the patients displayed individuality. Some, like humans in illness, were restive, irritable and resentful. Others were gentle and quiet. And all of them seemed to know exactly what the doctors and nurses were there for.

Scenes in the Operating Room

THE operating room is perhaps the most interesting of all. It contains a fluoroscope, in which you can watch the heart-beat of your dog. While I was there the surgeons used the fluoroscope in operating on a police dog that had swallowed 14 iron bolts, seven tacks and three nails. And one spaniel, which had had to have a bone scraped daily but could not stand an anesthetic, went through the whole painful operation without a whimper, which is more than this writer could have done.

In the basement is adoption row. No place for the hard-hearted, for adoption row is where all the sad-faced and miserable lost dogs are kept. Many are restored to their distracted owners, but most of them are given to applicants who can provide good homes and affectionate care.

Every year I attend at this hospital their annual Mutt Dog Show. That is made up of the one-time lost dogs who have found good homes and have been fed up and prettied up and are taken back to compete for prizes of $5 gold pieces. Talk about excitement! The great Westminster Kennel Club Show in Madison Square Garden, for the dog aristocrats, is nothing to it.

I was speaking about the ability of dogs to think. A good many people who love dogs and have observed them carefully believe as I do that many if not most dogs have the faculty of logical thought. President Harding wrote me a letter once on that subject after I visited him at the White House and noticed a remarkable trait of his famous Airedale, Laddie Boy.

Laddie Boy had a habit of trotting from the White House proper to the Executive offices at lunch time to get his master and take him back. And I observed that if the President was busy and occupied, Laddie would lie down quietly and wait without—I was about to say, without a word. But without a movement or a bark. But if the President happened to be alone at his desk, Laddie Boy raised a great rumpus until the President got up from his desk and started for home.

Albert Payson Terhune, famed for his wonderful collies, rates their intelligence scarcely less than that of the average human. The charming Mrs. Coolidge is still another who knows that dogs think.

An Interview With Rags

A FEW days ago over at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, I interviewed Rags, mascot and hero of the 1st Division, A. E. F. We had a little talk in the kitchen of Maj. Raymond W. Hardenbergh's quarters at the fort. Rags is 17 now and a great old tyke. On his collar are two service stripes and a wound stripe. He was gassed in the war when he trotted out in No Man's Land at night to save a badly wounded soldier. If you tried to buy Rags from the 1st Division—for any price—they would run you off the reservation.

The funny thing is that Rags is really French. Sergt. Donovan, of the 1st Division, was walking along the Rue Pigalle, in Paris, one night in 1917—a rainy, chilly night—when a little bunch of dog, sopping wet and miserable, rubbed against his ankle. Donovan was feeling pretty good, what with a little red ink and a taste or two of cognac, so he bent down and picked up the pup. Clear against all regulations, the sergeant smuggled Rags past the military police and up to the front.

In no time at all the little dog became the pampered pet of the whole 1st Division. He came out of the storm of shot and shell unscathed, except for a touch of mustard gas in the lungs, and when the 1st Division came home in its glory, Rags was right up front with the general, Grover Whalen welcomed him like Queen Marie or the Prince of Wales, and the 1st Division held a review for him on Governor's Island and formally decorated him. His footprint is preserved in the archives of the British army and he has almost as many medals as Gen. Pershing.

The 1st Division will hold a reunion at Fort Hamilton next month, and when the boys get together Rags will be the center of the show. He assured me in dog language that he was feeling pretty well and holding his age nicely, but rather wished he could find a dentist who could provide him with a new set of teeth.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

In indulging yourself in your favorite sport, how much consideration do you give whether it is convenient or not for your family?

No matter what the [illegible] of others on your time, d[illegible]sh aside their rights if it [illegible] to interfere with your pers[illegible]ec-reation?

Do you excuse yourself [illegible] ing that you are willing t[illegible] others to have the privi[illegible] spending their time in a wa[illegible] pleases them, if they desire s[illegible] thing different.

But perhaps their desires ar[illegible] different that both cannot ca[illegible] on at the same time and place.

You want the family car, an[illegible] they need it in another direction.

You say you are not selfish, but only enthusiastic, and that you have only one form of amusement and care for no other.

Your words don't sound very reassuring.

It may be true that you care for one thing only, but at the same time you don't seem to recognize the fact that your nearest and dearest have a certain claim on your time. A fifty-fifty spirit is the only fair settlement.
